

Joplin contract on display

A major attraction for the Scott Joplin Ragtime Festival arrived in Sedalia Monday — the original contract Joplin signed to publish his "Maple Leaf Rag."

The documents was sent to festival coordinator Larry Melton by John Stark III of Des Peres, Mo. He is the grandson of John Stark, the Sedalia music dealer who signed the contract to publish Joplin's best known rag in 1899.

Portions of the typewritten, one-page "article of agreement" are blurred, and show evidence of being damaged by water at one time.

Witnessing the signing of the contract was R. A. Higdon, an attorney of the period. The signatures of the two parties to the contract also appear at the bottom of the page, John Stark & Son and Scott Joplin.

Higdon evidently drew up the agreement, since his handwriting is recognizable in a sentence added to the last paragraph of the contract, stipulating that neither Stark nor Joplin would sell a copy of "Maple Leaf Rag" for less than 25 cents.

The contract will be displayed during the festival at the Sedalia Public Library along with other Joplin material.

The contract reads as follows:

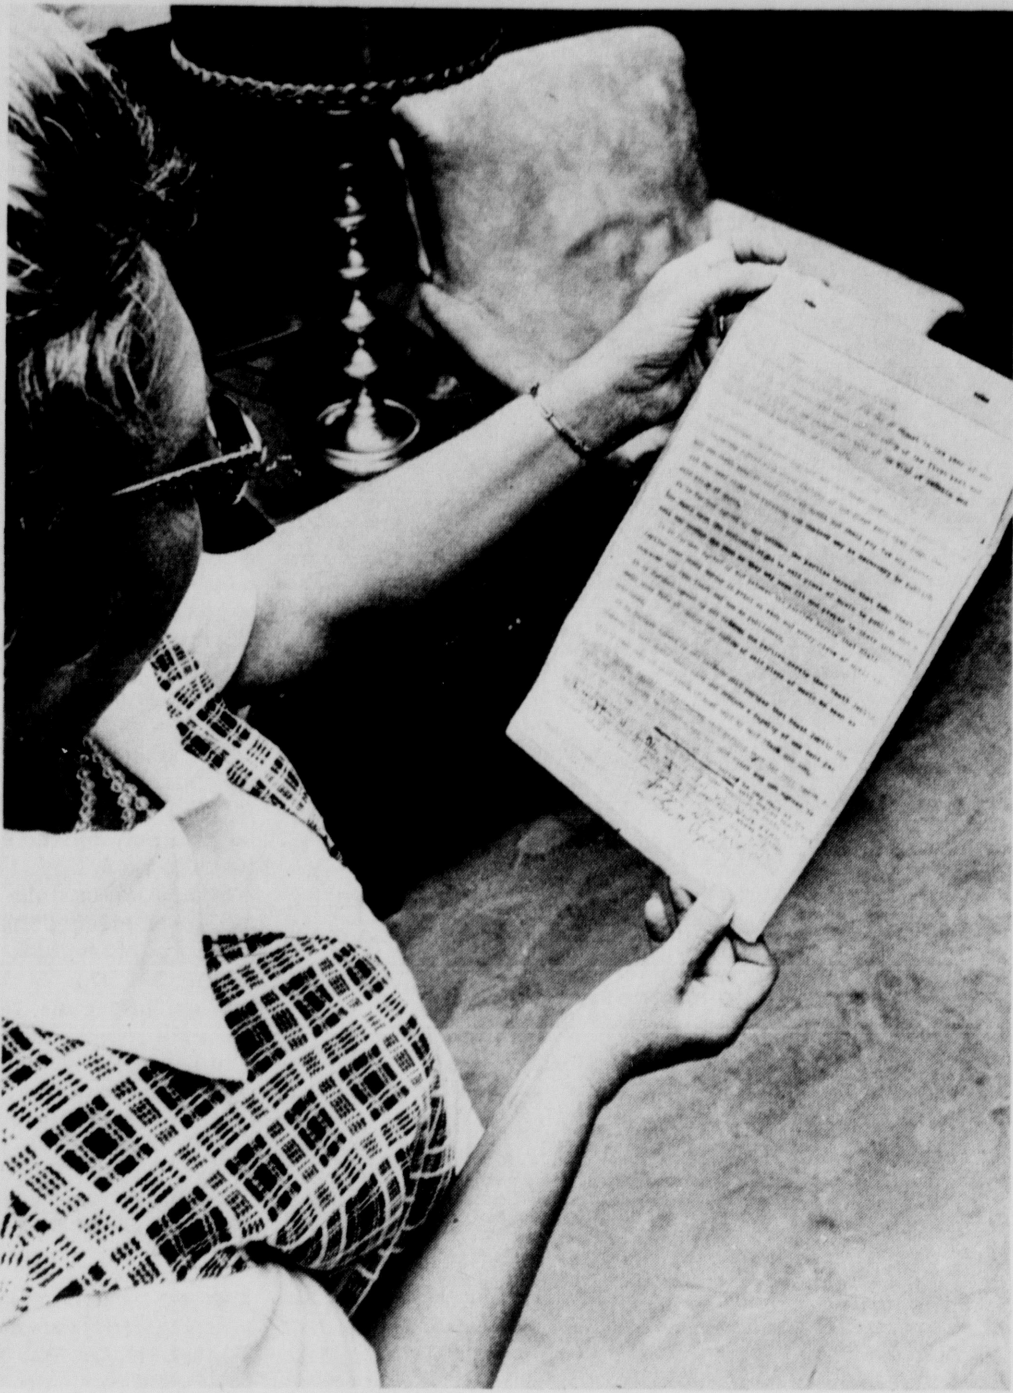

Article of Agreement

This agreement entered into this 10th day of August in the year of our Lord 1899 by and between John Stark and son party of the first part and Scott Joplin party of the second part both of the City of Sedalia and County of Pettis and State of Missouri.

Witnesseth: That whereas Scott Joplin has composed a certain piece of music entitled Maple Leaf Rag and has not funds sufficient to publish same it is hereby agreed with above parties of the first part that John Stark and son shall publish said piece of music and shall pay for all plates and for copy right and printing and whatever may be necessary to publish said piece of music.

It is further agreed by and

State approval of hospital's building site still required

A spokesman for the State Division of Health said Tuesday his agency has not approved the building site for the proposed Sedalia Medical Center.

Sigmund Oxenhandler, president of the company that plans to build the hospital, told The Democrat-Capital Tuesday that the Division of Health had approved the building site, however.

"The site location has been approved," said Oxenhandler, president of American Institutional Development. He said that the approval came recently in a letter to his architect, Jon Mackgoy, St. Louis.

However, Gerald D. Woods, director of the bureau of health facilities planning and construction of the Division of Health, said his office never was requested by Oxenhandler to determine whether the site for the proposed private, for-profit hospital would meet state hospital licensing requirements.

"We've had no formal contact from Oxenhandler regarding preliminary plans or a building site," said Woods.

He said Oxenhandler made one visit to the Division of Health on March 1. "He just told us he wanted to build a hospital in Sedalia," Woods said.

When contacted Tuesday morning about the discrepancy, Oxenhandler said he would instruct Mackgoy to explain the conflicting statements. Mackgoy had not called as of 1 p.m.

The proposed site for the 150-bed $3.5 million facility is on 13.22 acres behind the Ramada Inn between West Broadway and West 16th.

Before construction begins on the facility, the State Division of Health must approve the building site and preliminary building plans, Woods said.

Oxenhandler said he plans to submit his preliminary plans to the Division of Health in early August. Construction is expected to begin in late August.

Oxenhandler also said he would enter into a final contract to purchase the land from E. W. Thompson after the preliminary plans are approved by the Division of Health.

About $358,000 in radiology equipment already has been purchased for the hospital, Oxenhandler said.

Big cuts necessary

By STEPHEN A. SEEWESTER
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

Four City Council members and Mayor Jerry Jones began reviewing the proposed budgets of city departments Monday night and found themselves $1,100,000 short of the money requested. Inflation was cited as a major reason.

Four hours later the council had trimmed the deficit to $365,000. The cuts are not official until the full council has approved them. The committee will continue to trim the budget at 6:30 o'clock tonight in the Municipal Building.

Several major items have been cut from this year's budget and some items will be delayed. Not included in the original budget request was a $140,000 hangar which the Airport Board asked for and the councilmen did not discuss.

A planned reorganization of the fire department personnel to raise the number of officers from 11 to 13 was rejected. The council suggested only one new assistant chief be appointed to relieve Fire Chief Willis Jabas of pulling a regular shift.

The chief will spend his time with administrative details and help businesses overcome hazards which could be potential fires, according to Fourth Ward Councilman Bob Eidson.

The proposed new fire station was not excluded in the budget cuts, but may be delayed until next spring. Mayor Jones suggested the city let bids in January or February to spread the cost of the station into the next fiscal year. The council will ask for a $60,000 allocation this year for the structure. Originally the new station was to cost $200,000, which Jones thought could still be met despite inflation.

Inflation was the topic of most department budgets. Robert Cunningham, city engineer, told the council that many materials used in construction and to maintain city buildings, streets, sewers, etc., have increased up to 100 per cent.

The cost of slurry seal for resurfacing city streets and parking lots has increased from 30 cents to 50 cents per square yard, which is only 10 cents short of the cost for hot mix asphalt, it was pointed out. Cunningham said the slurry seal usually lasts two years as opposed to 10 years for the hot mix. In the past the difference of price justified the use of the slurry seal, said Cunningham.

Jones suggested the city use the hot mix asphalt even though it costs more. "But we will save in the long run," Jones said.

The council also tentatively cut $62,000 in new equipment for the street department and $77,000 in culvert, curb and gutter improvement projects.

The council left virtually untouched the sanitation department's request for $253,000 because "they spent $250,000 last year, which is not much of an increase considering they are adding a new man," Eidson said.

The proposed sewer department budget of $331,139 was also not altered appreciably.

The park department faced several cuts, and the council decided to look into the department's proposed pay hikes of $43,000. Tentatively cut were bleachers, paving near the concession stand at Centennial Park, four new tennis courts and a proposed new maintenance building. The cuts amounted to $102,000.

After trimming the excess from the departments, the council re-evaluated the revenue which the city is drawing. Mayor Jones and Fourth Ward Councilman George Dugan studied possible increases in sales tax revenue and asked City Clerk Ralph

President to seek closer Soviet ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon left today for a Moscow summit with a pledge to seek closer cooperation with the Soviet Union and a lessening of "the burden and threat" of nuclear weapons.

In a brief statement before leaving nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Nixon listed three goals for his summit meeting with Soviet leaders:

- To strengthen U.S.-Soviet ties.
- To "develop areas of cooperation to displace areas of confrontation" elsewhere in the world, and
- To progress toward limiting "both the burden and threat of nuclear weapons."

The Moscow summit is expected to produce a partial ban on underground nuclear weapons tests and an agreement in principle to harness fast-developing nuclear technology.

But Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a news conference Monday that the third annual summit is unlikely to produce a comprehensive treaty limiting offensive nuclear weapons.

Nixon, Kissinger and a huge entourage were to stop first in Brussels so Nixon can sign a new declaration of trans-Atlantic cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on Wednesday.

Nixon said he hoped the declaration to be signed there would bring "new purpose and new direction" to the alliance.

The chief executive spoke informally to a group of White House employees before making the helicopter ride to Andrews.

The presidential party, including Mrs. Nixon, departed from Andrews at 8:42 a.m.

In Brussels, Nixon will confer also with Italian Prime Minister Mariano Rumor, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and NATO officials.

He will spend a week in the Soviet Union, arriving there Thursday. Top subject on his agenda is nuclear weapons controls.

"For the United States not to make a major effort in this field is something no future generation could possibly understand," Kissinger told a presummit news conference.

But, he said, the administration will not be deterred by allegations that it is engaged in bad-faith diplomacy designed to blunt the congressional impeachment drive against the President.

In his news conference at the State Department, the secretary denied negotiating a secret agreement with the Soviets in 1972 increasing their sea base missiles by 70 and reducing the American total by 54.

However, he acknowledged that the Russians were asked to sign an "interpretive statement" after the treaty was negotiated to clarify how their sea based missiles would be counted.

Later, after Kissinger met in closed session with the Senate subcommittee on arms control, the chairman, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said the issue was not really the number of missiles involved but "the withholding from the Congress and the American people a secret agreement."

Nixon, who will hold talks with Soviet leaders including Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev, is expected to sign a package of agreements on trade and technological matters. Kissinger indicated the President also would try to ease restrictions on Jewish emigration.

Meanwhile, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said the arrest and detention of dozens of Soviet Jews in advance of the summit meeting was an affront to the United States. A bipartisan group of 40 House members urged Nixon to raise the issue of the status of Soviet Jews.

Newspapers win editorial issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — A unanimous Supreme Court today declared that states cannot demand that newspapers give political candidates free space to reply to editorial attacks.

The court overturned a 61-year-old Florida law imposing such a requirement. The court said the law violates the First Amendment free press guarantee.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote for the court, "The choice of material to go into a newspaper, and the decisions made as to limitations on the size of the paper and content and treatment of public issues and public officials — whether fair or unfair — constitutes the exercise of editorial control and judgment."

He said the government cannot interfere with a newspaper's judgment about what it publishes.

In a separate case, the court ruled 5 to 4 that private individuals may sue news media for libel without proving reckless disregard for the truth, even when speaking on public issues.

The court thus refused to extend to private individuals the rule it has laid down for public officials and public figures. That rule requires that public figures prove reckless disregard for the truth by the media before they can sue for libel.

In the case of private individuals speaking on public issues, the court said, proof of negligence is enough when seeking only actual damages.

However, such individuals must prove reckless disregard for the truth by the media to sue for punitive damages, the court said.

In other decisions, the court ruled that:

- City transit systems do not have to accept political advertising in their vehicles.

- Threw out a case brought by a citizen asking the court to rule on the propriety of a congressman's membership in the military reserves on the grounds the plaintiff was not directly affected.

- Dismissed a $165,000 libel judgment against the National Association of Letter Carriers and its Richmond, Va., local for describing three nonunion workers as scabs.

Committee meets behind closed doors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee went behind closed doors today to decide whether it will make public the evidence received so far in its impeachment inquiry.

One member said the decision may lead to keeping the committee's deliberations secret until it is ready to start voting on proposed articles of impeachment.

Citing the committee's rules, Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., raised the question of whether the subject of releasing evidence could be considered in public.

The rules require keeping confidential all evidence received from grand juries and other confidential sources. The hearings have been closed for the past six weeks.

However, business meetings of the committee are required by House rules to be open and today's session began as a public one until Waldie raised the question.

Waldie favored keeping the meeting open but thought the issue should be discussed

Job title is changed

Smith appointed director of Fair

Wendell Smith, who became acting secretary of the Missouri State Fair two weeks ago, has been named director of the Fair, it was learned Monday.

Smith, 41, Route 2, was named superintendent of concessions in February, 1973, by then-Secretary Ron Jones. He stepped into the higher position on a temporary basis June 11 when Jones became an assistant to James Boillot, state commissioner of agriculture.

Under new state reorganization, the title of secretary of the Fair is being changed to director, Smith told The Democrat-Capital.

Smith said Jones dropped by his office on the Fairgrounds Saturday to tell him of the appointment.

"I think we'll continue on very much the same as it's been. There are no big changes to be made that I see," Smith commented. "Actually, I don't anticipate any problems at all because the groundwork has been so well laid. There are only details left."

Smith revealed that the naming of an assistant director who will double as superintendent of concessions can be expected Wednesday or Thursday. He

Move over Spiro

Vice President Gerald Ford teed off in a benefit golf tournament at Plymouth, Minn., Monday and promptly did what his predecessor, Spiro Agnew, was known for — bopping a spectator with a golf ball. Ford's 75-yard tee shot on the first hole soared almost straight up and grazed the head of Tom Gerard. Gerard was examined by a fireman (bottom) and later at a hospital. There was only a bump on the left side of his head and no fracture. (UPI)

The action was taken Monday. There were nearly 100 communities, counties and water and sewer districts in the running for the $74.5 million in federal funds allotted to Missouri in the next fiscal year for site acquisition, planning or construction of sewer facilities.

Quickie diets cause problems

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a 17-year-old girl and have a weight problem. A year ago I weighed less than 100 pounds. Now I weigh 138 pounds. To get under 100 pounds I went on a diet which my parents thought was a sensible diet lots of protein, no desserts, lots of vegetables and fruits, only the good things for me, I thought. Three months later I was slim, but had developed a foot drop. To make a long story short, I was in and out of doctor's offices and hospitals several times before they decided it was caused by a sudden weight loss.

After that I started eating normally, plus started taking vitamins to correct the foot drop. I also got a job after school. Right now my foot drop has been corrected, but I am overweight. My grandparents seem to think that my job has something to do with this problem. The place where I work is a quick food take-out establishment and 75 per cent of the food prepared is fried. My grandparents claim that being around all that cooking oil has caused it to penetrate by body, causing me to be overweight. I am trying to diet again and cut down on my eating, but have had no success. Your help will be greatly appreciated.

Dear Reader — No, you won't get fat from cooking oil penetrating your body. The only way calories penetrate the body is by way of the mouth. You can't inhale calories either.

If your foot drop was because of weight loss it must have been associated with lack of thiamine (vitamin B1) or from pressure on nerves to the leg in some mechanical way. The latter seems unlikely. Thiamine does help in such problems. A number of overly restricted diets are deficient in thiamine. A young, active girl, often still growing and developing should never be on a diet that causes her more than a steady weight loss of two pounds a week — and a loss of only one pound a week is much better. It's slow but safe and trains you how to eat so it doesn't come back.

Try again, but be sure you are still getting enough calories to lose weight only gradually and that your diet contains enough vitamins and minerals.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have read that certain vitamins can make your hair return to its original color. Can you tell me what this vitamin is and how much to take to obtain the desired result, or even some improvement in color? I have also seen a doctor on T.V. who said that his brown hair was a result of his taking vitamins, otherwise, it would have been white.

Dear Reader — This idea is completely without scientific foundation. There is nothing in any vitamin that will return your hair to its natural color. About the only way the man on T.V. could have brown hair because of taking vitamins would be if he was wearing a wig after having lost all of his hair from taking toxic doses of vitamin A (NEA).

People in the news

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Randolph and Catherine Hearst have gone on a vacation to ease the strain of awaiting word on their kidnapped daughter, Patricia.

A family spokesman said Monday the Hearsts left over the weekend for an "extended rest for Mrs. Hearst," who has been suffering from emotional strain and a broken wrist. He did not say where they went but said he expected them back before July 4.

Patricia Hearst was kidnapped Feb. 4, and the Symbionese Liberation Army claimed responsibility for the abduction. The 20-year-old heiress later announced she'd joined the terrorist S.L.A. and now is wanted on several warrants.

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Mrs. George Meany, wife of the AFL-CIO president, has been released from Phelps Memorial Hospital here, where she was treated for chest pains.

Mrs. Meany became ill Saturday during a party given by former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller for Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. She was put in the hospital's intensive care unit because of past heart trouble.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peter M. Flanagan is resigning as assistant to the President and executive director of the Council on Economic Policy.

A White House spokesman announced Flanagan's intention to resign but said no date for his leaving had been set. A former New York investment banker, Flanagan has been a member of the Nixon administration since its start and has taken part in Nixon campaigns since 1959.

Nixon accepted the resignation with "the deepest regret."

WASHINGTON — Air Force Lt. Gen. Daniel James Jr., the highest ranking black in the armed forces, has been appointed to a new post that could lead to his becoming commander of the Military Airlift Command, Pentagon sources say.

James will become vice commander MAC on Sept. 1. He has been deputy assistant secretary of defense or public affairs for more than four years.

Low bids are announced

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Apparent low bids were announced Monday on 15 state projects by John Cooper, director of the state Division of Design and Construction.

M&P Construction Co. of Carthage was the apparent low bidder at a $472,154 base bid for construction of a new National Guard armory at Joplin.

Schell Construction Co. of Jefferson City, at $118,233, was the apparent low bidder on building a paint shop at the State Arsenal in Jefferson City.

David E. Ross Construction Co., Independence, was the apparent low bidder on two projects at the Higginsville School and Hospital. For alterations to Cottage B, the Ross bid was $197,470. For physical plant improvements, the Ross bid was $42,939.

At $169,821, Marine America Corp., Bryn Mawr, Pa., was the apparent low bidder on dredging John L. Westcott Marina at the Trail of Tears State Park at Cape Girardeau.

For sprinkler systems at four cottages of the Farmington State Hospital, Quality Fire Protection, St. Louis, was the apparent low bidder at $79,750.

B.D. Simon Construction Co., Columbia, was the apparent low bidder on alterations to the children's ward, new storage room and physical plant improvements at the Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center, Columbia, at $66,400.

At $64,000, J. Dickherber Inc., Wentzville, was the apparent low bidder on air conditioning wards at the Farmington State Hospital.

For physical plant improvements at the Malcolm Bliss Mental Health Center, St. Louis, Westbrook Inc., Bridgeport, was the apparent low bidder at $48,720.

Recently ill

The White House disclosed Monday that President Nixon recently suffered an inflamed vein condition in one leg but now is "in good health and looking forward to his trip" to Europe and the Soviet Union. The President's "mild" illness was diagnosed as phlebitis, a spokesman said. Nixon is seen here Monday after signing a piece of legislation at the White House. (UPI)

Clot in Nixon's leg is 'resolved'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, one of the healthiest of post-World War II presidents, suffered from a mild clot in a leg vein during his recent Middle East trip, the White House says.

The clot, termed phlebitis by Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren, set in before the trip began and "it has now been resolved," Warren said Monday.

Dr. Walter Tkach, Nixon's physician, reported that the President is "in good health and is looking forward to his trip to Brussels and the Soviet Union," Warren said.

Warren did not disclose in which leg Nixon suffered the phlebitis and did not say what, if any, treatment was given.

According to medical dictionaries, phlebitis is an inflammation of a vein, often associated with a small clot and is most common in veins of the leg.

It may follow injury or infection, the books say. They add that treatment includes use of elastic supports and aspirin and there is no need for the patient to cut down normal activity.

Nixon has been seen limping from time to time in the past but White House officials had offered no explanation for this. Warren said he did not see Nixon limp during his nine-day trip to the Middle East.

Throughout his political career Nixon has been hospitalized only twice.

The first time was in 1960 when he was campaigning for president against John F. Kennedy.

Nixon was hospitalized for 12 days with an infected left knee. Nixon said the infection appeared after he bumped his

Barber Examiners board is criticized

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Auditor's office has criticized operations of the state Board of Barber Examiners, saying there was no documentation that members worked on 856 days for which they were paid.

The board members conduct most of the examining of applicants for barber licenses and inspection of the shops. The audit covered the four years ending June 30, 1973.

The audit report said $21,400 was paid to board members for 856 days for which no reports were on file.

State law establishes a rate of $25 per day plus travel expenses. No reports were on file to indicate the days worked by board members, the audit said. Instead, payments of fixed monthly amounts were made to each member.

The audit recommended that all board members prepare monthly reports and that they be paid only for those days actually worked.

State Auditor John Ashcroft also recommended the attorney general's office look into the matter.

When inspectors were paid, the audit report said, the board estimated the number of days the inspector worked and the inspector was given $25 per day, regardless of the number of inspections performed on that day. The board has only two secretaries.

The report said the new three-member board appointed last March, is taking corrective action. Former Board President Hartrel Brock of Charleston was unavailable for comment. Other former members are L. R. Violet of St. Joseph and Lawson E. Quinn of Raytown.

The new board members are Phillip Luebbert Jr. of Jefferson City, Daniel Sullivan of St. Louis and Melvin G. White of St. Joseph.

"These flagrant abuses of fees collected from Missouri's barbers are intolerable," Ashcroft said. "The barbers are not receiving services for which they are required to pay and the public has not been protected."

Other findings of the audit included unjustified travel expenses, inadequate personnel records, inadequate property control, weak cash control, late deposits of receipts and incomplete minutes of board meetings.

Tips for saving RV fuel

NEW YORK (AP) — Although recreational vehicles consume less than 2 of one per cent of all petroleum products used each year, this miniscule figure can be lowered even further with conservation measures, believes Bob Behme, recreational vehicle editor of "Field & Stream" magazine.

Behme points out that additional cuts in fuel consumption can be achieved if RV enthusiasts adhere this summer to these on-the-road and in-camp guidelines:

—Drive at an even speed. Make 50 to 55 m.p.h. your speed range. It is the most economical way to drive.

—Take shorter trips. A 50-to 100-mile weekend can be just as much fun as a longer run.

—Keep an even, constant pressure on the accelerator. Smooth, steady speeds are most economical.

—Avoid "jack rabbit" starts. They demand extra fuel.

—Study traffic conditions before you reach them. Avoid unnecessary stops. Lost momentum means more fuel must be consumed regaining road speeds.

—Turn off the engine when you stop for more than one minute; even a one-minute stop requires more fuel than restarting. Do not race an engine. The practice is wasteful.

—Check tire pressures daily. Underinflation increases the rolling resistance and demands more gas.

—In camp, if the climate warrants heating, reduce the thermostat setting. As at home, a 68 degree setting means lowered fuel consumption. Prevent drafts. Check the insulation around doors, windows and skylights. Close the curtains at night. They reduce heat losses, as do storm windows.

—A shower requires less hot water than a tub.

—In the kitchen use the fewest possible burners. If you use an oven, preheat for only a few minutes.

—Use fewer lights. Whether your rig is equipped with electrical or butane lighting, you can save substantial amounts of energy by reducing the number of units burning.

The most important consideration for saving fuel, regardless of the model RV you drive, says Behme, is weight. Weight affects fuel economy. In loading, balance your vehicle and carry as little as possible. Take less than a full tank of water and only the gasoline needed to make camp and return. Excess fuel, like excess water, adds weight. Instead of carrying groceries for a full camp-out, buy some along the road closer to your destination.

Finally, Behme advises, be sure to keep your vehicle's engine in perfect tune. Improperly operating emission controls, worn sparkplugs, bad points or a poorly adjusted carburetor always increase fuel consumption.

Escapee may have taken O'Connor car

The man who stole a Chevrolet Impala June 18 from Pat O'Connor Chevrolet-Buick-GMC Inc., 1300 South Limit, may be in custody now in Aurora, Mo.

The man was identified as Donald O. Lansdown, 30, also known as Dan Reed, a June 8 escapee from the Enid, Okla., state work farm, Lawrence County Deputy Sheriff Kenneth Perkins said Tuesday.

The car was recovered by Jefferson City police Sunday near the Holiday Inn there.

The auto was reported stolen in Sedalia when a man who identified himself as Dan Reed went to the auto agency, told the salesmen he wanted to show the car to his wife, drove the car away and failed to return it.

Authorities said a man who also identified himself as Dan Reed rented a car in Jefferson City and was arrested Saturday in Aurora by Lawrence County sheriff's officers on a Lawrence County charge of attempting to issue a no funds check.

While in jail on the check charge, Lawrence County sheriff's officers discovered that he was wanted in Oklahoma for escaping custody.

Perkins said Lansdown remains in the Lawrence County jail. The deputy sheriff said he didn't know whether he would be prosecuted in Lawrence County or extradited to Oklahoma.

Photographs of Lansdown will be sent from Aurora to Sedalia to determine whether he is the man who stole the car.

The stolen car was not damaged, Fairfax said.

Perkins added that Lansdown was in the Oklahoma state prison system on a forgery charge.

Grant 2 Sedalians a change of venue

Two Sedalia men were granted a change of venue to Cooper County Circuit Court in Boonville Tuesday morning in Pettis County Circuit Court.

The two are Tony L. Powers, 21, and Clyde Powers, 24, 5 Burton Drive, Oak Tree Manor. Both are charged with a felony charge of assault with intent to do bodily harm.

The charge stems from a Nov. 10 incident at Houk's Bar, 1600 South Grand, when the Powers allegedly attacked Lanny B. Houk with a tire tool and steel rod.

In Magistrate Court action Tuesday, Lawrence Clifford Sisco, 40, Route 1, LaMonte, waived a preliminary hearing and was bound over for trial to Circuit Court on a felony charge of driving while intoxicated, third offense.

Sisco was arrested by the Highway Patrol June 15 near LaMonte. He is free on $1,000 bond.

Smith

indicated that three local persons are being considered for the post.

Smith said "major considerations have been taken care of ... for most of the major jobs or duties, people have already been acquired, so there will be no personnel changes from what we have now."

Asked about how a new concessions man would be able to cope with the job in view of the short time between now and the State Fair, Smith explained that Mrs. Ron Rouchka, concessions secretary, would be more than capable of smoothing the bumps for the new individual.

Smith revealed that his family will not be moving into the house on the Fairgrounds normally occupied by the Fair secretary. He explained that just two years ago, his family moved into a newly-constructed home at Monsees Lake Estates. He said the house was built to suit the family and that they prefer living in the country. He added that all of the individuals being considered for the assistant director have indicated a willingness to occupy the Fairgrounds home if appointed.

Both Smith and his wife Rogene are Nebraska natives, moving here in 1964. They have four sons, ranging in age from 10 to 15. Prior to his employment with the state, Smith was sales manager at radio station KJIS. He holds a bachelor's degree from Nebraska Wesleyan College at Lincoln.

New president

Robert W. Phillips, left, out-going president of the Sedalia Rotary Club, presents the gavel to William C. Hopkins, new president of the club, at an installation dinner meeting Monday night at the Ramada Inn. Besides the installation of officers, a highlight of the meeting was an address by Paul Young, special agent in charge of the Kansas City office of the FBI.

Complacency seen as big danger to modern society

"The affluence of our society has fostered smugness and complacency on the part of many of our citizens, who fail to realize that the preservation of our freedom must come from dedication and even sacrifice," Paul Young, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Kansas City, told members of the Sedalia Rotary Club, their wives and guests, at an installation dinner meeting Monday evening at Ramada Inn.

Young reported that lack of cooperation has degenerated into open insolence toward law enforcement organizations in many instances. This attitude and the failure to help others who are in danger can lead to degeneration of society from within, he warned.

To have a safer society for all, Young stated, persons must, as good citizens, demonstrate integrity and honesty in their daily lives; show respect for the rights of others and the law; demonstrate an active interest and become involved in government. "We can lose our right to freedom and our right to govern ourselves," unless we objectively exercise our right," Young stated.

Today, he said, society needs men and women to take their rightful place by contributing to the cause of right and justice and by standing up against crime, indecency and corruption. No longer should we be indifferent to others in danger, no longer should we show public apathy to violence, but become involved to do our part to preserve our freedom, he said.

The speaker was introduced by William Hopkins, who was a special agent for the FBI for several years.

Donald Barnes, a past president, installed the following officers: William Hopkins, president; Bill Arnold, first vice president; Larry McRoy, second vice president; Robert Hartzler, treasurer; Don Morton, secretary; and Ken Schreiner, Dr. Ronald Shuler and Everett Wood as new members of the board of directors. He recognized Robert Hardwick, Walter Savio and Jack Blackwell, who will serve the coming year of their term during the second Rotary year.

Barnes also presented Robert Phillips, retiring president, with a past-president's lapel pin, and Mrs. Charles Hofheins presented Mr. and Mrs. Phillips with a candelabra as a gift from the membership for serving the club during the past year.

Guests for the meeting in addition to wives of members were Mrs. John C. McLaughlin, Mrs. William E. Hurlbut, Mrs. Donald S. Lamm and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene England.

Phillips recognized Dale Wasson for his arrangements for the dinner meeting; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Barnett, who are observing their 50th wedding anniversary and Dr. and Mrs. Shuler, who were observing their 19th wedding anniversary on Monday.

Couple drops case in Circuit Court

Plaintiffs of a $65,000 damage suit filed Feb. 6 in Pettis County Circuit Court dismissed the suit Tuesday.

Roy E. Fowler and Jo Ann Fowler, Walnut Hills, sought $15,000 actual damages and $50,000 punitive damages from the Walnut Hills Development Corp. Inc.

The plaintiffs contended that a water and sewage drain pipe installed by Walnut Hills for use by the Sedalia Surf Club diverted rainfall from its natural course onto the Fowlers' property, and that leaks in the sewer line formed several stagnant pools of water on the property.

The Fowlers also had asked in their petition for a permanent injunction to prevent Walnut Hills Subdivision from using the sewer line.

Investigation is ordered by judge in Phillips case

COLUMBIA — Boone County Circuit Court Judge Frank Conley Monday ordered a pre-sentence investigation for Kim Eugene Phillips after Phillips' attorney, Adam Fischer, indicated he would file a motion for probation, Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming said Tuesday.

The action came after Conley formally sentenced Phillips to 50 years in the state penitentiary for murdering Mrs. Karen Jones in Sedalia on Aug. 13 last year.

Fleming said Phillips was ordered to appear in court on Sept. 9 after the investigation is completed.

Phillips was sentenced to 50 years in prison by a Boone County Circuit Court jury April 23 after the case was moved to Columbia from Sedalia on a change of venue.

Phillips remains in the Boone County jail.

City budgets

Dedrick to find out the assessed valuation of city property.

The increased revenue and budget cutting still left the council members $365,000 short when the meeting adjourned at 10:45 p.m.

Mayor Jones indicated inflation had an effect on the increased sales tax revenue, which could result in a $50,000 boost to the city's economy this fiscal year. However, the council was forced to cut many improvement projects out of the budget because of the lack of funds, Jones said.

"The large deficit is the result of aggressive council members and city department heads," Jones said.

Besides Jones, Eidson and Dugan, Second Ward Councilman Raymond Bales and First Ward Councilman Allen Hawkins attended the session.

Church is entered, but nothing missing

Calvary Baptist Church, 16th and Quincy, was broken into sometime Monday night, according to police, but apparently nothing was taken in the incident.

Police said the rear door of the church was pried open, apparently with a knife. The Rev. Charles Hendrickson, pastor, indicated nothing was missing from the building.

In other police news, Shelby Oehrke, 2620 East 15th, reported that thieves broke into a 1973 Chevrolet at Pat O'Connor Chevrolet-Buick-GMC, Inc., 1300 South Limit, sometime Friday. The rear window was broken to gain access to some engine parts stored in the car. Damage was estimated at $150.

Drowning victim's body is recovered

BLACKWATER — David Vastbinder, 16, Kansas City, drowned Monday when he got a cramp while swimming with friends in Wild Cliff Lake, a rock quarry near here.

His body was removed from about 60 feet of water Monday afternoon by divers, according to the Cooper County sheriff's department.

A spokesman for the sheriff's department said it was "an old abandoned rock quarry filled with water and a party spot."

The spokesman also said it was "the third or fourth drowning that has happened there."

The sheriff's department was notified of the incident early Monday morning and began a search, the spokesman said.

To move that piano

It takes skill as well as brawn

Moving a piano from point A to point B can literally be a pain in the back. But for Mike Rooks, a local piano technician, it's merely a matter of physics and experience.

Rooks, who has been moving pianos for about three years, said it is not a highly technical process, but "there is a certain amount of skill and knowledge connected with it."

For example, it is essential to know where most of a piano's weight is located and to work with the weight rather than against it.

"For example, uprights are top heavy and they almost always will fall to the back," Rooks said.

Rooks said an upright piano usually weighs between 400 and 500 pounds. Moving that much weight can be dangerous to the mover as well as the piano, if it is not done properly, he said.

Rooks pointed out that he often has moved a piano that was placed in a home by as many as "six burly amateurs who just picked it up and carried it in."

"Well, that's great if you like hernias," he chuckled. "But when people offer to help me move their piano, I just say I prefer to bring my own experienced help."

"Most people think they have to hurry up and move a piano, but I like to take it nice and slow."

Unless he's moving a grand piano, Rooks needs only one other man to help move an upright or spinet from a ground level floor.

Dudley Lehmer, college student, is one of Mike's most frequent helpers.

"Dudley's the best help I've ever had. He knows what to expect from a piano, he's strong ... and we think alike when we're working."

Rooks usually takes full stock of a situation before he even blankets the piano for moving. He surveys where the piano will have to be moved, through which exit, and the number of steps he will have to negotiate.

In addition to knowing what to expect from a piano, there are certain tools of the trade needed to move the instrument with the least amount of chaos.

Sturdy ramps can alleviate the problem of moving a piano over front porch steps or a high curb. And a professional piano mover would be lost without a dolly. The task is to lift the piano from one end, slide the dolly underneath it and ease the piano back down on the dolly.

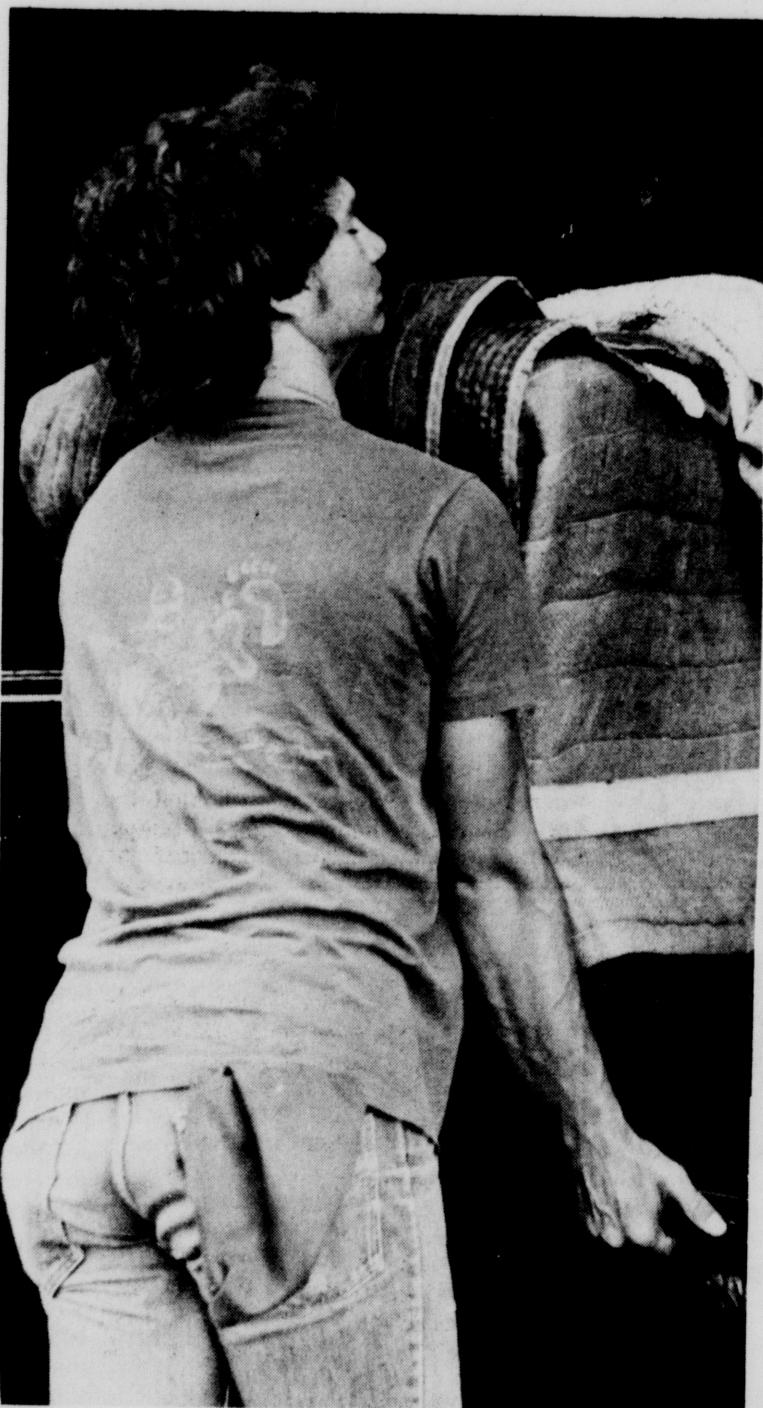

Home safe

Ye old upright made it safely home to Rooks' Ye Old Piano Shop, 109 South Kentucky. Below, Rooks gets a firm grasp on the instrument while attempting to slide it on a dolly. Rooks and Lehmer, left, glide the upright into position on a metal frame used for holding the instrument for repairs and rebuilding.

Heave ho!

Moving a piano is great exercise. It's also a lot of hard work, as shown by "Mike Rooks' grimace, above, as he guides a 400 pound upright onto the moving ramp. Rooks, a local piano technician, explained that moving a piano properly requires skill as well as muscle. At right, Dudley Lehmer, Rooks' moving partner, gets a tight grip on the blanketed upright to ease it into place in Rooks' workshop.

Polly's pointers

Pattern has her going in circles

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with those colleges that start classes in mid-August. My two sons work in resort areas to earn their tuition and expenses for college. Some employers will not hire students who cannot work through Labor Day. This is making it increasingly hard for young people to find summer jobs that are scarce. — MRS. H.W.

DEAR POLLY — Like Pat I, too, had trouble with the thread breaking (due to the new lightweight spools) when sewing on my machine. To solve this I put a couple of iron washers on top of the spool to add weight. — MARY R.

DEAR POLLY — and Pat — Sewing too fast can cause the machine bobbin to jump up and hang to break the thread. The wrong kind of needle or thread also can cause trouble. One thing few think of is that tiny slit in one end of the spool that catches the end of the thread. Turn the spool so the thread does not pass over this slit end. Or, cover it with tape and see if the thread continues to break. — ALICE.

DEAR POLLY — Like Pat I have been upset by my machine thread breaking often and finally found the cause to be a little loose screw in the bobbin. — ALMA.

DEAR POLLY — After washing my hair I rinse it with cold water. This closes the oil glands and I do not have to wash it so often. — DENA.

DEAR GIRLS — This Pointer was printed in this column some years ago but is well worth repeating. I have used it constantly since then and now would not feel my hair was clean if rinsed with warm water. The effect is so stimulating. I use it even in winter when the water is icy cold. — POLLY.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I wish some reader would tell me how to cut out a round floor-length tablecloth. I have tried and failed so many times and I do think they look so pretty. — MRS. J.D.W.

Sun cover

Even if you already have a tan be sure to provide your skin with some kind of sun protection. A tan does not protect you from sun poisoning.

Some situations, however, call for improvisation. For example, Rooks once moved a grand into his downtown shop. A grand piano is moved on its side, and all movable parts are taken off. This makes it top heavy and almost too tall to fit through a normal doorway. The seven-foot grand that Rooks moved was too tall to fit in his truck with a dolly under it.

"So, like the Egyptians did with the pyramids, I rolled that grand on a piece of pipe and moved it in just as easy."

Once the piano is inside the truck, Rooks straps it tightly with special fasteners called chain binders. This prevents unnecessary jarring that could throw the instrument out of tune.

Rooks pointed out that it is not necessarily true that all pianos must be tuned after they are moved. It depends on the instrument.

"A real good piano that has tight pins and that is moved very carefully, will not drop tune appreciably."

"But all pianos aren't like that," he said. "I've heard a piano drop tune just by picking up one end of it."

When Rooks does move a piano and it needs tuning, he usually waits a few days, so the instrument will adjust to the temperature and atmosphere in the building. Rooks explained that tuning is a skill and should not be attempted by amateurs.

Rooks said his career as a piano technician was a matter of "sheer chance."

While working on a degree in music at the University of Missouri, Kansas City, he was offered a University job as a piano technician's assistant.

Through the job he learned tuning and repair skills and eventually taught tuning classes for UMKC piano majors.

Rooks, a member of the Piano Technicians Guild, tuned pianos for about 2 years, after graduating in 1968. He later bought his own truck to move pianos.

There are two other guild members in Sedalia, George Young and J.W. Watts. But since Rooks is the only guild member involved in moving, he sometimes helps out other members who need pianos moved for refinishing or rebuilding.

"The men in the guild are friends rather than competitors in this business," Rooks said.

Rooks, who recently opened Ye Old Piano Shop, 109 South Kentucky, attributes a good deal of help and guidance to other Sedalia guild members.

He recalls making a wishful statement years ago when the idea of being a piano technician first piqued his interest.

"When I first started in this, I said I'd like to make my living at this someday. It looks like fun. And my mother scoffed and said, 'You'll never make a living at it.'"

"Well, I'm not setting the world on fire," he added, "but I am doing it. And I like it."

Old fashioned July 4 planned

An old fashioned July 4 will be sponsored by LaMonte Community Betterment at LaMonte R-IV School this year. Games and contests for all ages will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. A basket supper will be served from 5 to 6 p.m., followed by a men and women town and country ball game.

"Uncle Boob," a Sedalia band, will provide dance music for youths from 9 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Tickets are $1 in advance or $1.50 at the door. Beverages and snacks will be served.

Former Sedalian wed in Kansas

Chester A. Brown and Melva Pangrac Hill, both of Salina, Kan., were united in marriage June 8 at Kansas Wesleyan's Miller chapel. The Rev. Duane Dyer, executive vice president of KW, officiated.

Brown was the executive manager of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce during the late 1940's and the early 1950's. He retired from Kansas Wesleyan's College April 30.

Giant-size inflation south of the border

Someone has come up with this capsule definition of inflation: too much money chasing too few goods.

As prices keep increasing in response to all the money around to be spent, wages follow, creating the well-known vicious circle of inflation.

America's rate of inflation is running at an adjusted annual rate of more than 12 per cent. Things could get a lot worse, or maybe even better, before the year is out, depending upon which school of economists you wish to believe.

No matter how bad things are, human nature being what it is, one can always take comfort in the knowledge that some people have it worse. And if you're speaking of inflation, the really big leagues are south of the border.

Take Chile for instance, where the cost of living increased 700 per cent last year, and is still going strong.

Or look at Uruguay. Between 1963 and 1973 Uruguay's inflation rate was 10,000 per cent, according to the International Monetary Fund.

In Argentina, the price of a newspaper is 200 pesos; that's a 200,000 per cent increase in price since 1944. It's as if an American were forced to pay $200 for a paper that cost a dime 30 years ago.

Such horror stories are by no means isolated examples. But the point is clear: inflation is a world-wide problem.

And no one, so far, has come up with a solution.

Recalling the six-minute Louvre

PARIS — One of the main reasons I came back to Paris was to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the breaking of the six-minute Louvre. It was exactly 20 years ago to the day that a young American student named Peter Stone amazed the world by going through the Louvre museum in five minutes and 19 seconds.

Buchwald

As everyone knows, there are only three things worth seeing in the Louvre museum — the Venus de Milo, the Winged Victory, and the Mona Lisa. The rest of the stuff is all junk.

For years tourists have been trying to get through the Louvre as quickly as possible, see those three things and then go out shopping again.

Before World War II, the record for going through the Louvre was seven minutes and 14 seconds. But after the war, as clothes got lighter and cameras got smaller, people kept cutting down the time, and in 1948 a man known as the Swedish Cannonball, paced by his Welsh wife, did it in six minutes and 12 seconds. For the first time, there was serious talk of breaking the six-minute Louvre.

But it was to be four more years. On June 18, 1954, Peter Stone, under perfect tourist conditions, literally flew through the Louvre, around the Venus de Milo, up past the Winged Victory, down to the Mona Lisa and back out again into a waiting taxi. He achieved the impossible, bringing fame and wealth to himself and glory to his country.

President Eisenhower personally sent him a telegram which read: "I rejoice with all Americans at your amazing feat. You're what the United States is all about."

So here I was 20 years later at the Louvre museum with Peter Stone to relive that great moment in history.

Stone, now middle-age, paunchy and slightly gray, unrecognized by most of the tourists who were going through the Louvre. As we went over the same course, he noted, "It's all different now. There are very few American tourists any more, and it's only a matter of time before the Japanese will take the record away from us."

"Peter, I was there the day you broke the six-minute Louvre," I said. "I remember your telling me at the time that you were going to do it. What made you so sure?"

"I had discovered something that nobody else knew," he said as we walked around the Venus de Milo, "and that was you didn't have to pay admission on Sunday mornings to get into the Louvre. In that way, I could cut 20 seconds from my time. The second thing I did was leave the film out of my camera. I carried less weight than other tourists. Finally, I had developed a nonskid sneaker in the States so I could make the sharp turns around the Winged Victory without slipping on the marble."

We walked up the marble staircase past the Winged Victory. "This is where I made up 30 seconds," Peter said. "Most tourists look at the back of the Winged Victory, but I said to myself, 'If you've seen one Winged Victory, you've seen them all,' and I just whizzed by without stopping."

"What did you do after you broke the 6-minute Louvre?" I asked Peter.

"I did some exhibition running at the Prado in Spain and the Tate Gallery in London. The Russians invited me to run through the Hermitage in Leningrad. It was the first time the Soviets had ever asked an American to race through one of their museums. But it was during the height of the cold war and John Foster Dulles wouldn't let me do it."

"So here is 20 years later. What happens to a Louvre champ as time goes on?"

Peter replied: "The legs go first, then the wind and finally the eyes. I doubt if I can get through the Louvre in 10 minutes now in any condition."

We arrived at where the Mona Lisa hung when Peter had broken the record. The picture wasn't there. I asked an old guard, "Where is the Mona Lisa?"

The guard shrugged his shoulders and replied: "In Japan."

Tears came to Peter's eyes as he said: "It figures."

A conservative view

Press is damaged by leaks

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Barry Goldwater, Patrick Buchanan, and Ken Clawson exploded in sequence last week, like a string of dynamite blasts, on the matter of "leaks" in the national press. The situation demands attention and it merits concern, but it defies easy answer.

Kilpatrick

The senator from Arizona, the President's top speech writer, and the head of White House communications were outraged — justifiably outraged — at the torrent of leaks flowing chiefly from the House Judiciary Committee. Goldwater wanted to send the editors of the Washington Post to jail, a prospect not without a certain appeal, and Buchanan spoke scornfully of "weasels in the chicken house."

I have been in the news business all my life, and I cannot recall any situation that approaches the situation that now obtains. Every day brings a fresh leak of some confidential document. It is not only the Judiciary Committee that gushes its subterranean secrets; the Senate's Watergate committee and possibly the FBI — this is not clear — also are involved.

In the matter of leaks from the House Judiciary Committee, it is plain that someone with access to the committee's confidential files is behaving, if not dishonestly, at least dishonorably. A number of memoranda prepared for the committee's use by William P. Dixon, a Democratic staff lawyer, have been deliberately leaked to the press. Dixon is perhaps the most prolific writer since Charles Dickens. His leaked memoranda are damaging to the President, and so long as the memoranda are not publicly released, they cannot be examined by other reporters. They are shots from ambush.

In my own view, the conduct of the leakers ought to be roundly condemned. In times past, in such matters as Daniel Ellsberg and the Pentagon Papers, some plausible appeal could be made to a "higher morality." Ellsberg's position was that he was so distraught, and so profoundly disturbed by the nation's involvement in Vietnam that he was compelled to breach his word of honor. He had to reveal the war documents, he said, because there was no way the people could learn the truth otherwise.

No such rationalization is available to the anonymous source who leaked Dixon's memorandum of June 6 on June 17. Release of this confidential statement could not conceivably serve some "higher morality." It served the cause of the partisan Democrats who are out to get the President. Peter Rodino's failure to plug these leaks, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is one more reflection upon his lack of capacity for his job.

What of the role of the newspapers? The ethical and professional questions here are far more complex. One starts with the plain truth that Dixon's memoranda are news. Newspapers exist not to suppress news, but to print it. If a newspaper is given confidential material, having demonstrable news value, the newspaper's duty is to print it, unless — unless what? Unless other considerations are more important.

One such consideration, obviously, is the national security. This is not involved in the current leaks. Another consideration, far more difficult to appraise, is the image and reputation of the press itself. By serving as a willing ally to the committee's hatchmen, the conniving newspapers inevitably create the impression that their purpose is not to pursue the news, but to pursue a vendetta instead. It is an ugly image, harming the press as a whole. Speaking for myself, as one professional newsmen, I voice my resentment, and my protest.

Take festival precautions

In reading over a letter to the editor June 21 concerning the upcoming (Ozark) Music Festival, I find that this person that likes music is himself over reacting. He talks about the State Highway Patrol and the National Guard readying themselves for a full-scale war. This is most certainly not the case, but it is good to know that if any trouble does arise it will not be without attention, and corrective measures will be available and at hand.

This young man ... talks about the "authorities" provoking violence. Now I would just say that if the authorities by doing their job in preparing for crowd control provoke violence, then it looks like the music lovers maybe were looking for violence themselves.

For my part I don't care if they have a good time but I don't want their good time to come at my expense or the safety of any citizen anywhere who doesn't want to be bothered.

I personally feel that this music festival will go on quite smoothly if all parties involved quit borrowing trouble. I think anyone who would spend $15 to hear this deserves to be left alone if at all possible.

It is refreshing to know that people are at least not apathetic about everything that happens. I thank the area enforcement agencies for doing the proper thing in preparing for the most that can happen and then hopefully not having to use any of the preparations.

Merry-go-round

Senator's son knew of break-in plans

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — CIA front man Robert Bennett, son of veteran Sen. Wallace Bennett, R-Utah, has conceded that he knew a White House burglary-bugging team was on the prowl in advance of the celebrated Watergate break-in.

A secret memorandum, written by his CIA case officer, states that the senator's son withheld vital information from the authorities.

In an interview with my associate Les Whitten, Bennett acknowledged he knew at least three days before the Watergate burglary that White House aide E. Howard Hunt and his second-story crew had plotted to break into the campaign headquarters of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and bug the place.

Instead of reporting the conspiracy to the police, Bennett kept his mouth shut. He also confided to his CIA contact that he had held back information from the original Watergate prosecutors when they later questioned him about the Watergate break-in.

Had Bennett informed the police of the plot to bust into McGovern headquarters, as the law requires, the subsequent Watergate caper would have been aborted and the course of history might have been changed.

This episode is another link in the mysterious CIA involvement in Watergate. We uncovered the first piece of the puzzle as early as April 7, 1973, when we reported that the CIA had "ordered its agents not to talk to the FBI about the explosive Watergate case." Thereafter, we published several reports about the CIA and Watergate, but the full story still hasn't been told.

The CIA used Bennett's public relations firm, Mullen and Company, as a spy front. On its payroll was none other than Howard Hunt, the Watergate conspirator, who came to the firm from the CIA and later moved over to the White House.

Bennett's nephew referred a Brigham Young University student, named Thomas Gregory, to Hunt who recruited the young man as a political spy. Gregory infiltrated into the campaigns of the President's two chief Democratic rivals — first, Sen. Edmund Muskie's staff, then Sen. George McGovern's staff.

But Gregory, a conscientious Mormon, became uneasy about this undercover work. He spoke to his bishop about it, who was concerned about the ethics of the job.

Then Gregory went back to Bennett and explained his misgivings. As Bennett related it, Gregory had been told by Hunt to work late one night at McGovern headquarters and leave a door open so the White House burglars would sneak in.

Gregory informed Bennett that Hunt was "reporting to someone higher up." Hunt's White House connections impressed young Gregory. Bennett said he also felt Hunt would do nothing illegal because "he had a full-time lawyer advising him." The lawyer, it turned out, was Hunt's co-conspirator, G. Gordon Liddy.

Bennett said he advised Gregory "to get out." The troubled student gave Bennett a letter of resignation to deliver to Hunt. Two days later, the Hunt-Liddy team broke into the Watergate.

Bennett was called in for questioning six times by the original Watergate prosecutors. He held back Gregory's vital information out of loyalty to the youth, Bennett claims.

But the prosecutors traced Bennett's long-distance telephone toll calls to Gregory. When Bennett learned this, he called the prosecutors and said: "Look, you've found Tommy. I'll tell you about Tommy."

PENTAGON PUPPET: Once again, we have caught Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., playing Charlie McCarthy to the Pentagon's Edgar Bergen. Perched upon the Defense Department's knee, he opens his mouth and the military speaks.

A month ago, we reported that Hebert, the imperious chairman of the House Armed Service Committee, had presented to the House a report on military aid to Saigon which was copied, virtually word for word, from Pentagon testimony.

Now, the crusty, old congressional "watchdog" has done it again. Included in his committee report on the Pentagon's supplemental budget request is a section on the Navy's proposal for a permanent base on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia.

It is practically a carbon copy of testimony offered by Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, the Navy chief, before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on March 20.

Apparently, Hebert's only disagreement with the Pentagon is over grammar. He tinkered slightly with the Navy's paragraphing and punctuation. He also edited out some of Zumwalt's "I's" and "We's" and substituted a few "observers."

"I always knew Hebert and his boys were pushovers for the Pentagon," one of Hebert's committee members told us, "but I never expected them to prove it so decisively. I am ashamed to say that right now the committee is nothing but a rubber stamp for the Pentagon."

Footnote: Repeated calls to the committee for comment have not been returned.

Ann Landers

Employee gains access to drugs

Dear Ann Landers: When I read that letter from the director of a hospital who mentioned pilfering of small items by hospital personnel, I knew I had to write.

Our 24-year-old daughter (college graduate and excellent student) left an unusually fine position with a promising future to take a job for less pay in the accounting department of a suburban hospital. We wouldn't understand it. She said she wanted to "be part of an institution that served humanity."

About three months later, the real reason became apparent. She wanted to become friendly with someone who could help her gain access to drugs.

I found a huge supply of pills and a syringe under her mattress. I knew the answers to many questions that had us mystified.

She is under a doctor's care now and returning to her old self. But it's been an uphill fight all the way.

Why don't hospitals keep all narcotics under lock and key? I'm sure if this happened to our child it has happened to others. Thanks, Ann, for any boost you might give this crusade. — Been Thru Hell

Dear B: I know of no hospital that allows employees easy access to drugs. Almost all hospitals have a carefully monitored drug-dispensing system. But no system is fail-safe. Drug addicts are among the cleverest of all thieves, and the most daring as well. When drugs become the center of a person's existence, he will figure out a way to get them.

Dear Ann Landers: I've seen some letters in your column from teen-agers who do baby-sitting, but I've never read a letter from a "career-sitter."

I've "raised" over 50 children, from newborns to 11 years of age. Some mothers still insist on calling me "the baby-sitter." ("Say hello to the baby-sitter.") I have a name and the kids use it, so why can't their parents?

Staying with youngsters has been my only source of income for many years. I pay taxes on my earnings. Yet, I've had mothers call and cancel two hours before I was due to leave the house. "Mary is going to stay with a friend," they say, or, "My husband doesn't feel well and we've decided to stay home." Frequently I've turned down other jobs and saved the evening for them. But they never think to pay me when they cancel.

Most of the people I work for are sophisticated, yet they act as if they've never heard of overtime. When they say they'll be home at midnight, and arrive at 2:00 a.m., I get the same pay for my "night's work."

In spite of my complaints, I've been happy with my children. They've kept me active and saved me from loneliness. I guess I just wish people would be more considerate and I figured your column was a good place to tell them. — Granny

Dear Granny: Your complaints could be easily remedied if you would discuss them with your employers instead of Ann Landers.

Tell them you expect to be paid if they cancel without giving you 24 hours notice. Charge by the hour instead of the job if people don't know the meaning of "overtime." And when they refer to you as "the baby-sitter," remind them that you have a name. Simple, isn't it?

Are you, or is someone you care about messing around with drugs — or considering it? Are all drugs bad? What about pot — in moderation? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs," separates the facts from the fiction. For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill plus a long, self-addressed envelope (20 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654. c. 1974 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Spradling, Boillet will stay

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — James R. Spradling and James Boillet will continue as directors of revenue and agriculture, respectively, under reorganization of state government.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond said Monday he will appoint the men, both 38, and both appointees of Bond in early 1973.

Spradling, of Carthage, formerly was president of Refrigerated Services, Inc., of Carthage and a director of the Carthage Publishing Co.

From 1961-72, he was a partner in the Carthage law firm of Birkhead, Spradling and Phelps. From 1969-72, he also was an assistant professor of political science at Missouri Southern College.

Boillet, a Kingdom City farmer, a former president of the Missouri Pork Producers Association and is a former board member of the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation.

In another appointment, Alfred Sikes, director of the department of consumer affairs regulation and licensing, named Robert H. Daugherty as director of staff services.

Since 1968, Daugherty, 35, has been employed by the Central Missouri Counties Human Development Corp. in Columbia.

Reorganization takes effect next Monday. Bond has also named the following department directors:

Robert L. James, office of administration; James L. Wilson, department of natural resources; Michael Garrett, department of public safety; Lawrence Graham, department of social services; and John G. Brawley, department of transportation.

Officers allege brutality

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP) — Police brutality charges brought by a former Poplar Bluff police officer and four current patrolmen are being investigated, the city council and police department said Monday.

Jimmy D. Coats, a former police officer, and Patrolmen William DePriest, William Taylor, Edward Cook and Larry Bacon have alleged that prisoners have been beaten and threatened by other Poplar Bluff officers.

Coats, now police chief of Chaffee, Mo., said prisoners in 1972 and 1973 were beaten and forced to stand on chairs with ropes around their necks while being interrogated by Poplar Bluff policemen.

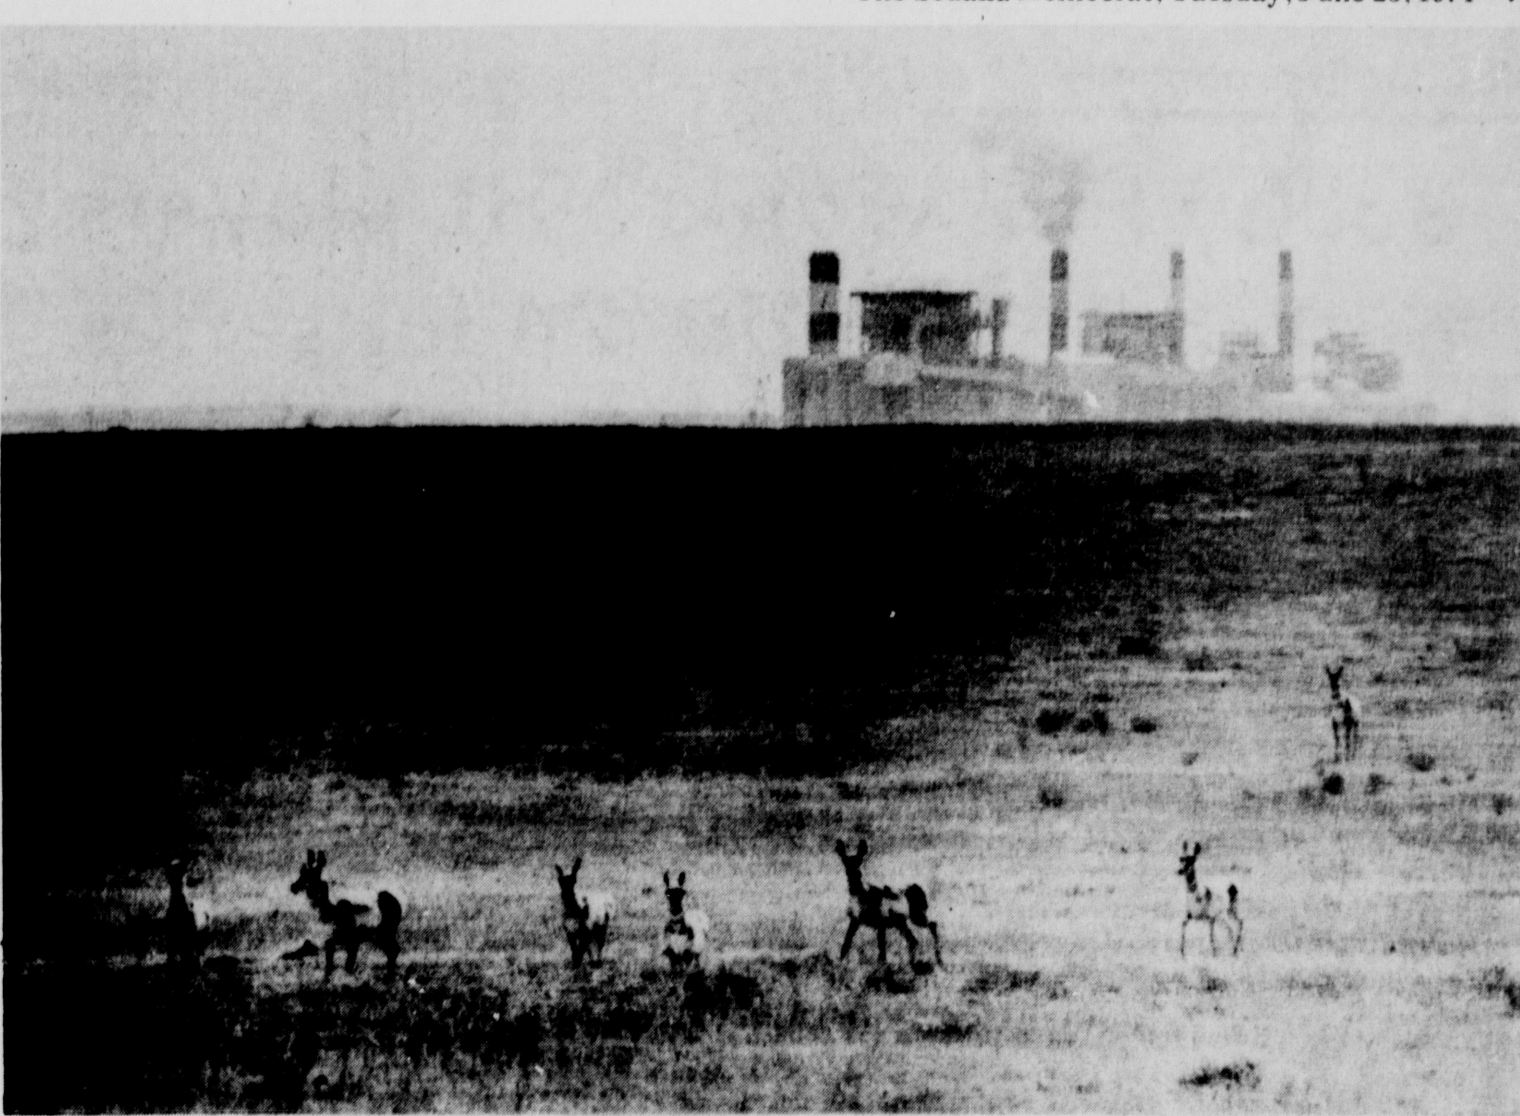

Coats left the department in 1973 after being suspended for allegedly slapping two prisoners.

The other patrolmen have called for an investigation of an incident of brutality which they claim happened last October.

City officials said the charges were being investigated.

"We have discussed them among ourselves," Mayor Denny Lanning said, "and we are going to have a meeting... We are doing some checking on it ourselves."

Poor Missouri primary voter turnout expected

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A large number of uncontested seats in the state House of Representatives and political indifference due to Watergate could cause the lowest voter turnout for the upcoming elections in the history of Missouri, according to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick.

"Right now, I'm predicting one of the poorest voter turnouts in the history of the state," Kirkpatrick said Monday just prior to the deadline for candidacy withdrawal from the August primary.

"I hope I'm wrong, but you've got to have local contests to stir interest in a campaign," the state's chief election official added.

Thirty per cent of the candidates for the 163 seats in the state House have no opposition in either the primary or the general election, with 10 of the 49 falling into the ranks of the unopposed because of withdrawals.

Although the number of withdrawals from primary races since the April 30 filing deadline has been about the same in past years, the 7 per cent loss of candidates in the House represents one of the highest defection rates because of the small number of candidates filing for office this year.

Only 373 names will appear on ballots this August for election to the House compared with 439 for the same 163 seats in 1970, the last mid-term general election.

In other categories, the number of candidates for the 17 of the state Senate's 34 seats open this year fell by only one during the withdrawal period to 41.

Seven of the eight U.S. Senate candidates remain while the four men filing for the state auditor's post will all appear on the August ballot.

Withdrawals from the state's 10 congressional races brought the total number of candidates for spots in the Missouri delegation to the U.S. House from 42 to 39.

"These are unusual times," Kirkpatrick acknowledged of the candidate situation, "but I don't see any drastic changes in the pattern."

Potential office seekers often discover during the withdrawal period that their candidacy "hasn't caught on," he said. "They come to the conclusion that they don't have a chance to win."

But Kirkpatrick reiterated his belief that public interest is lacking in the election process this year "because the people are being turned off by wrongdoing in government, by Watergate and other wrongdoing."

Those withdrawing since the April 30 filing deadline are:

Nationalism above WHA or NHL

Bobby Hull wants NHL players on Team Canada '74 for series

TORONTO (AP) — Bobby Hull wants National Hockey League players on Team Canada 1974 with the World Hockey Association choices, and he doesn't think the NHL should be allowed to say no.

"I feel if certain individuals want to stand up and represent Canada, I don't see how they could be forced from participating," Hull said during a trip here to promote the Team Canada series in Moscow against the Russians.

"This is Team Canada, remember. I would like any Canadian who qualifies on the team."

Hull, player-coach of the Winnipeg Jets of the WHA, was in Toronto with Jets' owner Ben Hatskin seeking stronger media support for the Russian trip in September.

Hull said he still wants, in particular, Bobby Orr and Phil Esposito of the Boston Bruins and Bernie Parent of the Philadelphia Flyers, whom he said had expressed interest in the series before the NHL owners and the NHL Players Association last week barred their players.

"This should be above either the WHA or the NHL," said Hatskin. "Perhaps some public pressure will pry them."

"We definitely have the players in our league, but we would like the others because we want to beat the Russians eight to nothing."

Hull, who missed out on the 1972 Canada-Russian series when WHA players were excluded, said he thinks it is the "NHL establishment and Al Eagleson (director of the players' association) that's the cause of this."

"If I like to do something, I don't want to be told I can't do it," he said. "They're big boys now."

On record pace

Kansas City Royals' right-hander Steve Busby set an all-time American League record Monday night for consecutive batters retired. Busby, shown above against the White Sox Monday night, retired 33 consecutive batters over a period of 11 innings in two games. The former record was 32 held jointly by Vic Raschi and Lindy McDaniel, both of whom were with the Yankees at the time.

Sets AL record

White Sox solve Busby, Royals 3-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "I made some bad pitches..."

Steve Busby of the Kansas City Royals, his arm drenched in ice, mumbled the words after he failed in his bid Monday night to become only the second pitcher in baseball history to toss two consecutive no-hitters.

Busby not only lost the no-hitter on a one-out single in the sixth inning by Chicago's Pat Kelly but he wilted in the seventh and yielded three runs for a 3-1 loss to the White Sox.

The 25-year-old right-hander, who carried the second no-hitter of his short major league career at Milwaukee last Wednesday night, did not search for an alibi.

"The pressure and the ball-byout from the no-hitter last week didn't bother me," Busby said quietly. "No, there wasn't any pain in my wrist."

The pitcher had had his right wrist examined by physicians over the weekend and prior to the game.

"Even if there had been pain," Busby added, "I don't think I'd tell you. I never gave a thought during the game I might pitch a second no-hitter."

Busby, 9-7, reflected on Kelly's single.

"It had ended," he said. "The streaks had all ended. We had a 1-0 lead. I was just interested in preserving the victory. Sure, things were going through my mind..."

One of them undoubtedly was the seventh inning when the White Sox bunched four of their seven hits, one a two-run homer by Ron Santo, his fifth of the season.

Carlos May led off with a single, and Santo followed with his shot over the left center field fence. Bill Sharp doubled and rode home on Bucky Dent's single.

Busby may have been thinking of the one-run lead the Royals had taken in the sixth off Wilbur Wood, 12-8, on a walk to George Brett. Jim Wohlford's bunt and a run-scoring single by Cookie Rojas.

Or his streak of 17 straight hitless innings, ended by Kelly's heartbreaker. Or the American League record Busby set, retiring 33 consecutive batters over a two-game span. Vic Raschi of the New York Yankees set the old record of 32 in 1950, and Lindy McDaniel, then with the Yankees and now with the Royals, matched it in 1968.

Again, Busby's thoughts may have centered on the irony of it all. Back on April 27, 1973, as a rookie, Busby engraved his name in the no-hit records at Detroit. Exactly one week later, he tried for his second in a row. The end in that one came just where Monday night's ended... after 5 1-3 innings. Dave May hit a home run.

Busby didn't hear Chuck Tanner's remarks about his try for a second straight no-hitter but Steve undoubtedly would agree with the White Sox manager.

Tanner concluded: "It's awfully hard to throw two no-hitters back to back. Only one man in the history of baseball ever did that... Johnny Vander Meer."

Phillies acquire

Astros' outfielder

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies have acquired outfielder Ollie Brown on waivers from the Houston Astros for a player to be named later.

The Phils said Brown, 30, has 72 hours to report. The long-rumored deal was completed Monday. When he arrives, the Phils must cut another player, most likely a pitcher.

Toledo franchise

names IHL team

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Toledo's new entry in the International Hockey League will be known as the Goadiggers, a team spokesman said Monday.

The Goadiggers will replace the Toledo Hornets, who were transferred to Lansing, Mich., after last season.

Gibson sharp in St. Louis Cards' sweep

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "You never cruise, especially against a ball club like that," a perceptive Bob Gibson maintained. The aging Gibson, staked to an early lead, underlined the notation Monday night by bearing down and stopping the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0 on a four-hitter.

His top performance of the season checked his string of defeats at five and capped a St. Louis Cardinal sweep of a doubleheader.

"Sometimes you just have to pitch yourself out of a rut," observed Gibson, 4-8, who struck out 11 and walked three following a 3-1 Cards triumph in the opener.

"I felt fairly good tonight," he conceded, "but I've been feeling good for the past two or three weeks."

"Basically it was a matter of not hanging a lot of sliders like I'd been doing. I think I'd been hanging one out of every three."

The 38-year-old Gibson permitted singles to Paul Popovich, Gene Cline and Mike Ryan and a double to Richie Zisk leading off the fourth.

But he fanned Pirates rookie Mario Mendoza after a spectacular catch by Lou Brock thwarted a second-inning threat and struck out Willie Stargell and Kurt Bevacqua after Zisk doubled.

Meanwhile, Pirates pitcher Larry Demery, 0-3, surrendered Jim Dwyer's first major league home run in the second and served a three-run homer to Ted Simmons an inning later. "I've been throwing the ball good for a month," insisted Gibson, who has yielded 12 home runs, "but I've been giving up that long ball after a walk."

The Cards, who totaled only five hits, also made the most of six singles in the opener.

Four of the blows included run-producing smashes by Ken Reitz and Mike Tyson in the second off ex-Cardinal Jerry Reuss, 6-5, and a third run scored on an error.

Right-hander Alan Foster, 3-5, survived Richie Hebner's leadoff home run in the sixth and drew relief help from Orlando Pena and Mike Garman the final two innings.

Pirates Manager Danny Murtaugh, whose club has lost five of six games since winning six straight, was down following the double loss.

"I thought when we hit that streak we might be going," Murtaugh lamented. "Now it looks like we've cooled off again."

Scaramouche records best corrected score

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — The battle was under way today for top honors in the prestigious Newport-to-Bermuda yacht race after the record-breaking 655-mile pace set by a 79-foot U.S. ketch.

The Ondine, a Mamaroneck, N.Y., entry, reached St. David's Head Monday with an elapsed time of 2 days, 20 hours, 8 minutes, 22 seconds as the first of the 166 competitors to finish.

But the Scaramouche, a 55-foot sloop owned by Charles Kirsch of Sturgis, Mich., was the strongest early bidder for the title with a corrected time of 2 days, 15 hours, 59 minutes, 55 seconds.

Sailed by Sumner A. Long of New York, the Ondine, giving away as much as 25 hours of handicap time to the smaller boats in the race, chopped 2:03.1 off the mark set in 1958 by the Bolero.

But the smaller craft ranging down to about 30 feet in Classes A through F still held the advantage in the race. And many boats were not expected to complete the ocean course before Wednesday.

When Babe Ruth hit 60 home runs in 1927, the Yankee right fielder hit 32 on the road and 28 in Yankee Stadium.

Kentucky Colonels post filled

Ex-Milwaukee Bucks assistant takes ABA job with open mind

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The new head coach of the American Basketball Association's Kentucky Colonels says he's walking into the job with his eyes open.

"I know what I'm getting into," 40-year-old Hubie Brown said Monday night. "I know I'm getting into a pressure-cooker."

Brown, assistant coach with the National Basketball Association Milwaukee Bucks for the past two seasons, succeeds Babe McCarthy, who was fired last month after the Colonels lost four straight games of a playoff series with the ABA champion New York Nets.

His appointment as Colonels' coach was announced here Monday night at a press conference at which officials also said:

—The Colonels won't be playing any of their games at Cincinnati next season.

—The team has acquired 6-foot-8 Wilbert Jones from the Memphis Tams and 6-1 William "Bird" Averitt from San Antonio.

Ellie Brown of Louisville, majority owner of the Colonels, said Brown was the top choice for the coaching spot.

"We made this decision weeks ago," she said. "Hubie is our first choice."

Brown told a crowd of Colonels' season-ticket holders that he is used to pressure-cooker situations.

"It hasn't been easy being associated with Milwaukee because of the tall, skinny kid (Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) in the middle," he said. "Every loss was an upset, and everyone expected us to go for all the marbles. It's frightening how much the material here parallels the type that's at Milwaukee."

Brown also said his goals are the same as those of Mrs.

Brown and her husband, John Y. Brown Jr., who has drawn criticism in the past for involvement in operation of the club. Hubie Brown said he expects no problems getting along with the owners.

The break in the "Cincinnati connection" had been forecast for some time. John Y. Brown had said repeatedly that low gate receipts in the Ohio city had been costly.

Louisville box office receipts had been averaging $25,000, compared with $10,000 in Cincinnati.

Newcombe, Smith post easy first-round wins

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Don't accuse Ilie Nastase of overconfidence.

Woman named as men's swim coach

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A woman has been named to coach the men's swimming team at Old Dominion University, the school announced Monday.

Mary Fleet, who five years ago became the first woman to compete on the men's swimming team, also will coach the women's swimming squad, said Dr. Jim Jarrett, ODU athletic director. Miss Fleet coached the girl swimmers last season.

Miss Fleet was named ODU's most outstanding woman swimmer for four consecutive years before graduating in 1973. She is completing her studies for a master's degree in health and physical education at the school.

After scoring an 8-9, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 victory over Czechoslovakia's Jiri Hrebec in the first round of Wimbledon play, the second-seeded Romanian tried predicting which player might win the prestigious tennis event.

Nastase's name wasn't mentioned.

"I do not see how I can win here; I am not playing well," a tired Nastase said. "Newcombe should win, or maybe Smith."

Nastase's prediction seemed sensible enough. The top-seeded Newcombe, bidding for a fourth Wimbledon title, scored a 6-3, 6-2, 8-6 victory over Georges Goven of France. The fourth-seeded Smith, his serve smoking, breezed past Raz Reid of Greenville, S.C., 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

Smith didn't face much pressure; nor did many of the nine seeded players who advanced to the second round.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, seeded fifth but leading the tournament in screaming teen-age fans, scored an easy victory over Britain's Graham Stillwell. The 18-year-old Borg has swept the Italian and French championships.

Other seeded players to advance were defending champion Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, seeded No. 6; seventh-seeded Tom Okker of The Netherlands; 40-year-old Ken Rosewall of Australia, the ninth seed, and Spain's Manuel Orantes, ranked 12th.

Jimmy Connors, the third seed, didn't get to complete his opening match with Sweden's Ove Bengtson. Darkness halted competition with the Belleville, Ill., native holding a 6-1, 7-9, 6-2 lead.

Darkness kept Arthur Ashe and Russia's Alex Metreveli from beginning their first-round match. It was rescheduled to follow completion of the Connors-Bengtson match today.

After completion of the darkness-delayed matches, the women took over today's action.

Billie Jean King, seeded No. 1, drew a first-round bye in her quest of a sixth Wimbledon singles title. The chief threat to Ms. King is 19-year-old Chris Evert, who won the Italian and French Opens and the John Player tournament on her way to Wimbledon. Miss Evert also has a first-round bye.

Whalers, Cubs

sign agreement

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — The World Hockey Association's New England Whalers have signed the Cape Cod Cubs as their top minor league affiliate for the next two years.

Whalers' General Manager Jack Kelley said the Whalers will assign between four to six players to the Cubs of the North American Hockey League for the next two seasons.

Breezing along

Jimmy Connors of the United States, seeded third in the men's singles division at Wimbledon, returns this serve to Ove Bengtson of Sweden in their match Monday. Darkness delayed their match, which was scheduled to resume Tuesday. Connors has a comfortable lead, 6-1, 7-9, 6-2. (UPI)

A walk through the 19th century

Wimbledon remains unchanged as modern world moves on by WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The world spins along at a maddening pace. Jets cross oceans in a matter of hours. Computers think like men. Men walk on the moon. But Wimbledon remains unchanged.

For the next two weeks, it's almost like a walk back through the 19th century.

Ivy covers the brick walls of the old buildings erected when the All-England Club moved from Worple Street to Church Road. The stands are a deep, dull green, weather-beaten by the sun, winds and rain.

Although the rest of the booming tennis world long since has shifted to bright pastel colors for attire and opted for yellow balls, Wimbledon still adheres to its strict-all-white rule.

The players must wear white.

"It's a little strange," said John Newcombe of Australia, the world's best man player as he took the court for his first match. "I've seen nothing but yellow balls for months and now I must play with white."

"It sort of psychs you, but you get used to it."

In 1949 the staid Wimbledon directors were shocked when gorgeous Gussie Moran appeared on the court in sexy lacy panties. They rushed her to the dressing room for a quick change.

Two years ago Rosemary Casals drew a similar rebuke when she started to take the court in a pastel-colored dress. The ladies are permitted a slight color trim—so are the men—but the costume must be basically white.

For Londoners and other visitors, this is not a tennis tournament. It is a festival. Londoners begin applying for tickets a year in advance.

By car, tram and bus, they pour to this pleasant tree-pocked suburb, sit under green umbrellas and eat strawberries and cream.

Two years ago, most of the best players in the world—members of Lamar Hunt's World Championship of Tennis—were barred from competition. A year ago, the top players boycotted the tournament because of a ban against Yugoslavia's Nikki Pilic.

The crowd came, anyhow, ate their strawberries and cream, saw a minimum of tennis and went away happy. Wimbledon refuses to budge from its long, rich tradition.

The only concession made has been in the area of the tie-break, and Wimbledon has installed its own—about as ambiguous as the original system.

To staid tennis purists, this is hallowed ground. The grass of the 15 courts is like a precious carpet spread over the floor of a palace.

But it was not always so. In 1921, when the All-England Club was moved to its present site from Orle Road where it had existed since 1877, special soil was dug from the ocean depths to provide a perfect grass surface.

The grass later was found to contain live shrimp. The courts had to be dug up and started again.

Strike deadline nears

'Freedom issues' chief topic at NFL meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — So-called "freedom issues" are expected to be a main focus of negotiations resuming today between National Football League owners and players.

With a threatened players' strike looming less than one week away, the two sides have been called together by federal mediator Jim Searce to continue contract talks broken off suddenly June 13 in New York.

Other prime topics to be tackled at today's session are the league's pension and insurance plans.

The "freedom issues" formulated by the Players Association include abolition of the reserve clause, the option clause, the waiver system and a rule giving Commissioner Pete Rozelle the right to set the proper compensation for a club when one of its members plays out his option and signs with another team.

John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, bargaining agent for the owners, says the demands are excessive. "We are prepared to discuss modifications, not eliminations."

Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, president of the Players Association, responded that "we have laid out our position and we are getting frustrated."

The negotiations are slated tentatively to continue in Washington on Wednesday and Thursday, then return to New York next week.

The Players Association has announced plans to strike on July 1 if agreement on a new contract is not reached by then.

Joplin boy snaps golf ball tossing mark

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — James Calvin Young, 18, claims to have broken a record Monday found only in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Young, whose only witness was his brother, Alan, says he threw a golfball around a regulation length course, from No. 1 tee through No. 18 green, in just 91 tosses.

This would shatter the old mark listed in the Guinness book of 93 tosses, set Oct. 5, 1971 by A. L. Gastin on the University of Missouri course in Columbia.

Schoen looks to defense

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The World Cup scoring spree already may be over, and the West German Manager Helmut Schoen is looking now for more defense.

Twenty-two goals in eight matches over the weekend was the sort of entertainment fans were looking for.

But those 22 were one too many for Schoen. His team, though already qualified for the second round and still a favorite for the final, went down 1-0 to East Germany.

In his post-match analysis Schoen told newsmen: "We can no longer play open attacking football. Our tactics must now require full-time defense efforts from every player."

Similar noises are coming from the Yugoslavs, who meet West Germany Wednesday in their opening match of Group B at Duesseldorf.

Sweden and Poland, who make up the group, are proponents of open attacking football.

If they can be contained, two ties and a victory would be enough to put the Yugoslavs in the final four. So the second round may yield the same 0-0 or 1-1 draws as did the first until the chips are down in its closing matches.

The Dutch are favorites to go forward from Group A, which is completed by Argentina, Brazil and East Germany.

Before taking on the East Germans, Holland meets Argentina at Gelsenkirchen Wednesday.

Argentina meets East Germany Wednesday in Hannover, in what could prove another tactical draw. On Sunday comes World Cup history, when the Argentines take on Brazil. The two Latin American giants never have met in 44 years of World Cup campaigning.

BATTING—Jim Lowenstein, Indians, had three hits, including the first grand-slam home run of his major league career, and drove in five runs to power Cleveland to a 10-3 rout of the New York Yankees.

Injunction overturned

Appeals court clears way for WFL's raids

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The World Football Bateman of Dallas reversed a lower court injunction Monday that had halted WFL recruiting of players from the National Football League team.

WFL Commissioner Gary L. Davidson, organizer of the new league, said the ruling confirmed the WFL's belief "in the freedom of competition between leagues and the freedom of players to have viable alternatives in choosing employers."

He added that the WFL "has not, and will not in the future, violate the valid terms of any presently existing contract." He said players obligated to the NFL for 1975 and who have signed with the WFL would not join the WFL until 1976.

Tex Schramm, Cowboys' president and general manager, said he would have no comment on Judge Bateman's decision until club attorneys read the opinion.

Race goes after challenge match against Ramey

Harley Race has offered to take on Dr. Ken Ramey, manager of the tag team tandem the Interns, in a five-minute match as part of Tuesday night's wrestling card at Convention Hall in Liberty Park.

But for Race to meet Ramey, he must defeat Intern No. 2 in a best-of-three falls match, which highlights tonight's schedule.

The unusual challenge match came about as a result of last week's interference by Ramey in a tag team match.

Bob Brown and Omar Atlas will meet in a grudge match; the contest will be to a finish.

In other pairings, The Viking will meet Lord Alfred Hayes, and Intern No. 1 will take on Bobby Whitlock.

The first match is scheduled to get under way at 8:30 p.m. Doors open at Convention Hall at 6:45 p.m.

LA, Reds locked in voting battle

NEW YORK (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers, rivals for the National League's West Division crown, are on the verge of sewing up seven of eight possible starting spots on the National League squad for major league baseball's All-Star game.

Figures released Monday by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office show the Reds are leading in the race for four positions and the Dodgers three. With only two weeks of balloting remaining, all of the leaders appear assured of starting berths.

Only Atlanta's Hank Aaron, baseball's all-time home run king, has been able to break through against the Reds and Dodgers. Aaron is the fans' top choice for the game, leading all candidates with 902,630 votes.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose follows Aaron in the race among outfielders with 571,231 votes while Jimmy Wynn of Los Angeles is third with 497,232.

Catcher Johnny Bench, first baseman Tony Perez and second baseman Joe Morgan are the other Reds heading for starting spots. Bench, second to Aaron in over-all votes, was named on 812,684 ballots with runner-up Joe Ferguson of Los Angeles polling 242,013.

Perez has 319,640 votes to 287,022 for Bill Buckner of Los Angeles, and Morgan is a runaway leader at his position, topping Philadelphia's Dave Cash, 519,836 to 372,694.

Third baseman Ron Cey and shortstop Bill Russell are the other Dodger leaders. Cey has 470,651 votes to 305,013 for Pittsburgh's Richie Hebner. Russell leads Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion, 402,890 to 303,949.

Balloting ends July 8 for the classic, scheduled for July 23 at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium.

He should simply have covered West's seven of clubs with dummy's nine spot. This would have cost him a trick if East had started with exactly two clubs. But all the trick would have cost him, would have been a 30-point over-trick. As North pointed out you can afford that loss when insuring a slam.

Suppose clubs had broken 3-1. South would lose a club trick and could not lose two. Suppose East held all four clubs. West would have shown out and South would have known about the bad break. The only way to lose the slam was for West to hold all four and South to misplay the suit.

Pat Nixon's friends see tension on the First Lady from Watergate

Respite from troubles

Celebrating her birthday at a party with her staff, Pat Nixon displays a cake in the aisle of the Air Force One jet bringing her back to the U.S. from Venezuela and Brazil last March. The six-day trip to the inaugurations of the presidents of the two countries gave Mrs. Nixon a respite from Watergate, which upsets and troubles her despite her cheerful appearance, friends say. She has expressed special pride in her role as "Good Will Ambassador."

(AP)

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Late at night, when Pennsylvania Avenue is deserted, Pat Nixon sometimes leaves the White House to walk the quiet nearby streets.

Often she covers her blonde hair with a scarf so she won't be recognized, her daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, reports.

The late-night walks, two or three times a week, are something new. In a Watergate-troubled time, the strolls offer the First Lady privacy, relaxation, an escape from the "hermetically sealed-in" and constantly bustling White House, says the youngest Nixon daughter.

Some evenings, Mrs. Nixon is joined by Julie. Others, she walks alone, save for the ever-present Secret Service agents.

Those close to the First Lady see the signs of Watergate strain.

She "feels very deeply about this," and sees in Watergate an attempt by some people to get "her husband's last pound of flesh," says a very close friend, Mrs. Helene Drown, who has known Pat Nixon for 35 years. They were teachers together at Whittier High School in California before the Nixons married.

"But I don't think Watergate has affected her any more than any crisis they've gone through in their lives," adds Mrs. Drown. "Pat Nixon's motto has always been: It's better to laugh than to cry."

The laughter, the good spirits are what the public usually see. Hundreds of people who meet Mrs. Nixon in receiving lines find her a warm, friendly, smiling and responsive hostess.

"She goes merrily along as if nothing was happening," says Curator Clement Conger, who works with Mrs. Nixon to refurbish and replace White House furnishings.

"She tries to relieve the tension," daughter Julie adds.

The First Lady's social secretary, Lucy Winchester, bears that out with a report about Mrs. Nixon carrying off a poster showing a kitten clinging to a curtain rod. It was captioned, "Hang in there, baby," Mrs. Nixon took it to display in the President's bedroom.

The Nixons observed their 33rd wedding anniversary last Friday (June 21) and Mrs. Nixon expects to observe two more as First Lady, Mrs. Drown says.

"She doesn't seem to think her term in the White House will be terminated."

Reporters think Mrs. Nixon, 62, is showing signs of strain and her press secretary, Helen Smith, admits that "it's a difficult time for her."

In the few times she has spoken out after being pressed by reporters, Mrs. Nixon has proclaimed "I'm full of faith and confidence ... I'll have faith until I'm proven wrong."

When a reporter said, "This has been a hard year for you and you seem to be holding up marvelously ... what is it that sustain you?" Mrs. Nixon responded:

"The truth sustains me, because I have great faith in my husband. He's an honorable, dedicated person. And when you know the truth, you have nothing to fear. I have a very positive outlook."

While criticism mounts against Nixon, almost nothing is said against his wife and partner in 28 years of national politics.

Except for the fact that she was a wife co-signer of the income tax returns on which Nixon was found to owe $476,000, Mrs. Nixon has not been linked personally to any of the President's Watergate-related problems.

Mrs. Nixon disclosed recently that she has read all of the published Watergate transcripts. "It takes 9 to 12 hours," she said.

Mrs. Drown says Mrs. Nixon felt that the Presidential tapes should have been considered "like personal, sensitive diaries ... never to be released to anyone."

Julie Eisenhower, frequently the family spokesman on Watergate, has described her mother as "able to take things with a grain of salt. She's very philosophical and I guess she finds she can hold up under all this because she loves my father and believes in him."

It was a year ago that Mrs. Nixon expressed her faith and confidence in her husband on Watergate. When someone gave her a copy of a weekly Pennsylvania newspaper during a reception, she joked, "Well, I don't see Watergate on the front page. Something's wrong here."

Since publication of the transcripts, Mrs. Nixon is less inclined to joke about Watergate.

Once friendly and relaxed with reporters, she has become irritable with them.

"I'll pray for the press," she flung over her shoulder in turning aside questions on one White House occasion.

Mrs. Nixon even has displayed what her press secretary described as "a flash of anger" during a talk with reporters aboard her plane on the way back from her six-day Latin American goodwill visit last March.

It came when she was asked about "the strain of the past year."

"I really don't wish to speak of it," Mrs. Nixon said, standing up to cut off the interview. "It's just a personal thing and why bring that into the trip..."

Mrs. Nixon reportedly is distressed at the news media's constant efforts to get Mrs. Nixon to discuss Watergate at social events.

"She wants to focus on the positive," Mrs. Smith explains. Mrs. Drown adds that Mrs. Nixon has complained to her that reporters ignored events at the White House and she wishes they would give more recognition to volunteers and other groups she entertains.

Just as President Nixon has sought friendly audiences for his public appearances lately, Mrs. Nixon also entertains apparently supportive groups.

Sometimes as often as three afternoons a week, she will have two events on her calendar to greet such visitors as the Daughters of the American Revolution or wives of a doctors' group.

Though she once traveled across the country promoting volunteer work, Mrs. Nixon now confines her efforts to meeting groups in the Washington area. Since the fall of 1971, her travels in the U.S. have been limited solely to trips with the President.

There seems to be general agreement that Mrs. Nixon spends an unusual amount of time on her mail, which is said to average as much as 3,000 to 4,000 letters a week.

She works an estimated four or five hours a day at it.

Person to person

Mike Hembs holds up five fingers to show Pat Nixon how old he is during an animated dialogue with the First Lady at the White House in March. While criticism is mounting daily against Nixon, it's hard to find anyone with a word to say against his wife and partner in 28 years of national politics. There's nothing but the highest praise from those who meet her personally and almost an unwritten social rule to avoid anything unpleasant with her.

(AP)

Julie says her mother is "a compulsive worker" and often spends four hours at night on her mail, staying up after an official dinner party.

Some associates think Mrs. Nixon "works too hard. But Mrs. Drown explains "she's a perfectionist" and she "cares about people."

When she first came to the White House, Mrs. Nixon promised to open it to as many people as possible — not just "big shots." And she has kept that promise, claiming to have entertained more Americans at social events and worship services than any other First Family.

"Meeting people," is the thing Mrs. Nixon says she likes best about being First Lady.

The First Lady sleeps only a few hours at night, is up and about at 7:30 a.m. Mrs. Drown explains that from Pat's early years — she was orphaned as a teen-ager — "she had no time to lounge around."

Reporters rarely hear of Mrs. Nixon seeing friends other than Mrs. Drown, whose husband is a publisher's distributor, and Louise Thompson Johnson, another old friend from Whittier days, whose husband for years was an oil company representative in Washington.

But Julie says her mother has "a nice circle of friends. I wish she'd see them more often."

Julie describes her mother as an "outdoor girl, who grew up on a truck farm" and would like nothing better than to work in a garden. She settles now for potted plants at the White House.

Testing times

Pat Nixon accompanies the President as they prepare to leave Andrews Air Force Base for a recent visit to Oklahoma. The Nixons, who have just observed their 33rd wedding anniversary, are facing, in Watergate, the biggest crisis of their lives. Reporters think Mrs. Nixon is showing signs of strain, but her staff and friends maintain Watergate has not brought any visible change in her personally nor in her activities as First Lady. (AP)

Journalist leaves his profession and finds happiness in priesthood

By REV. THOMAS
SEGERSON
For the Associated Press

MONONA, Wis. (AP) — One good thing can be said about news stories concerning dissatisfied ex-priests. They give some of us the impetus to reflect on our own priesthood. A recent article by Bill O'Shea, circulated by The Associated Press, did just that for me. It got me to thinking about the past 11 years of my life and helped me to realize once again how happy and satisfied I am as a priest.

I gained many insights while thinking about O'Shea's life and comparing it to mine. The first of these concerned the fact that I am almost the exact opposite of O'Shea. He described himself as a former priest turned journalist who looks back. I am a former journalist turned priest who looks ahead.

I obtained my degree in journalism from the University of Wisconsin in 1952 and worked as an editor of an employee magazine and as a radio newsman for more than eight years. These were rather satisfying years for me because I usually had the feeling that I was doing something for other people — giving them a magazine to read or the news to hear.

Somehow, though, during those years, I felt there was more to life for me than this. I really longed for a job that would give me a greater opportunity to serve more people all the time. After much thought and prayer, I turned to the priesthood.

In 1963, at the age of 37, I entered the seminary, studied for six years, and was ordained in 1969 for the diocese of Madison, Wis.

Seminary training for me was a bit different than that experienced by men like O'Shea who was ordained in 1967. We were allowed more freedom and were not so "incubated," at least during the final years of study at Theological College of Catholic University in Washington D.C.

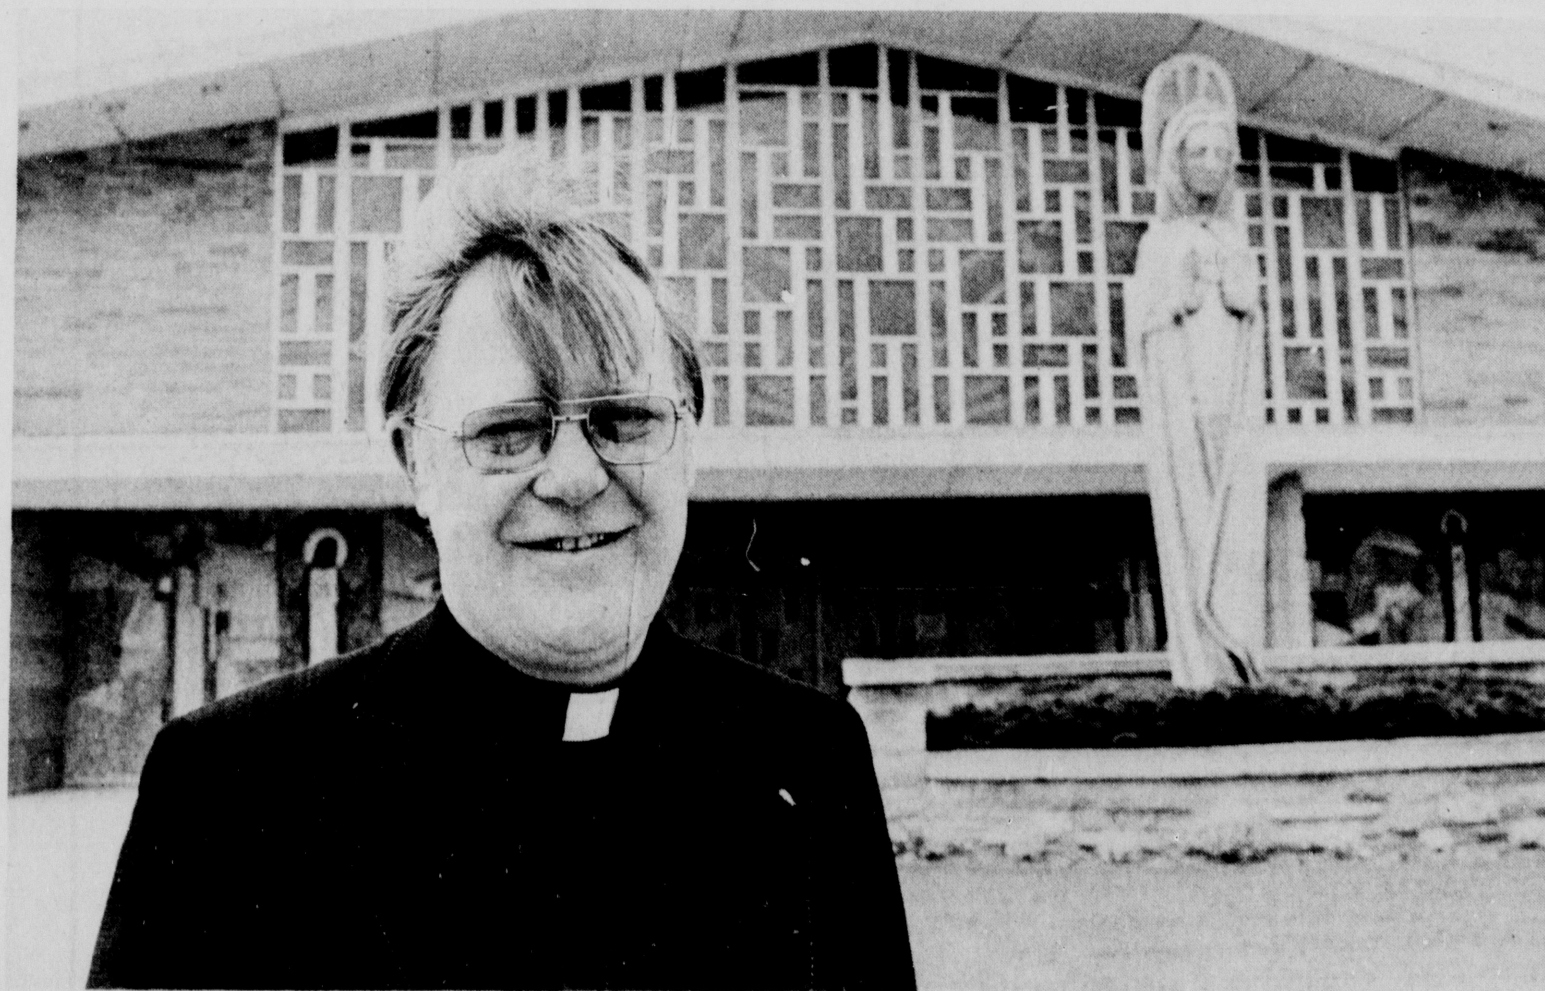

However, my first two years at Holy Apostles Seminary for Adult Vocations, in Cromwell, Conn., were quite traditional without much freedom to come and go and with much Thomistic philosophy and Latin.

Even though I came to that environment from a rather free life, I actually enjoyed the confinement and probably would have left the seminary if it had not been that way. I needed this kind of life to give me my first real chance to discover a loving God and learn just what that kind of God meant for me personally.

I enjoyed it and did not come out of seminary as O'Shea said he did — "a highly rational animal steeped in skepticism and drained of any religious sense."

I still have a letter written to me on the eve of my ordination by the man who was rector at Holy Apostles during my stay there. In this letter, he speaks of my "basic and deep common sense nobility of spirit and contact with reality" as assets in my ministry. I have to admit that I like to believe I had these qualities when I came to the seminary, but I also believe that seminary training did much to develop them.

The greater opportunity

The Rev. Thomas M. Segerson poses in front of the church of which he is parish priest in Monona, Wis. He came late to the priesthood — seeking "greater opportunity to serve more people all the time" — after the rector of our diocesan minor seminary spoke with me recently about freedom in seminaries and agreed that it has definite advantages. This happy priest, incidentally, is a member of the class of 1967, like O'Shea. He experienced the gradual change to a freer seminary life as I did at Catholic University.

We both agree that more freedom is good for seminarians and good for the priesthood. It gives young men a greater opportunity to associate with other people, to learn "what makes them tick," and a chance to develop a greater understanding and sympathy for people and their lives.

over eight years as a working journalist. He was 37 when he entered the seminary in 1963. He was ordained in 1969, and now finds happiness and satisfaction in being a priest. (AP)

I feel that I can speak for the majority of the 26 men from all parts of the country who make up my class of 1969 from Theological College, and I can honestly say that we came out of the seminary with a deeper understanding of and love for life, people, God, Jesus Christ, the Church and the priesthood. I am sure that the same thing is true of the four men who attended other seminaries and were ordained for the diocese of Madison with me.

Some lay people still display the old "spoiled priest" syndrome and harshly criticize ex-priests without trying very hard to learn the reasons for their departure. For the majority of people, though, it is just an accepted part of life today and they go on quietly and as unconcerned as usual.

The men I know in the priesthood give me the impression that they intend to stay there. Like me, these men are totally perfectly and even ridiculously happy. None of us are looking back.

We all look forward to serving God's people in a Church that is moving ahead, in a Church that loves people and wants them to be free — free to love and worship their God and free to accept God's love and give it to others.

We are going to "hang in there" and do our level best to convince others to join us. We firmly believe that the priesthood is here to stay, along with the Church and the people it is meant to serve.

Military-like work for young missionaries

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — "Get dirty for God—lay a brick" is the message some 500 teen-agers who want to be missionaries overseas are learning this summer at "the Lord's boot camp."

The youths come from all over for the two-week training program, where sponsors say they learn bricklaying, carpentry and other construction trades.

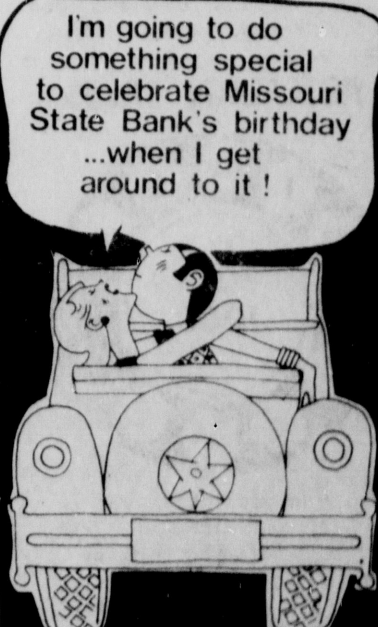

Robert Bland, director of the nondenominational Teen Mission Camp, says that after a couple of weeks of military-like discipline the youths find the transition to the poverty-stricken regions of Bolivia, Colombia, Haiti, Venezuela and Peru much easier.

"We challenge the kids to 'Get dirty for God,' to really put their faith into action," he says, adding that the young people are taught that their evangelism will be more effective if they put work first and preaching second.

They harden muscles by lunging sandbags, swinging over creeks on ropes and scaling 12-foot walls, and they learn to do without modern home conveniences.

The program started four years ago in Greenfield, Ohio, with 67 youngsters. This summer, the 500 teen-agers in the program come from 47 states, Canada and Mexico.

There's a lot more to it than gas economy.

With everybody talking about (and working for) gas economy, along comes Capri, the sexy European. It not only has European styling to brag about, but European ideas on gas economy are built right into it. Still, these aren't the only reasons why Capri sold more cars in its first three years in America than any other import in history. Shown above are 16 other great reasons for making your next car Lincoln-Mercury's Capri. Everything you see is standard on the Capri—everything.
